A SAFE INVESTMENT FOR YOU

Did you ever try to invest money safely?
Experienced Financiers find this difficult:
How much more so an inexperienced person.

...THE...

Twenty Payment Life Policy

(With its Combined Insurance and Endowment Features)

ISSUED BY

THE MASSACHUSETTS MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,

OF SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

is recommended to you as an investment, safe and plain. The Policy is plain, simple, and the privileges and values are set out in plain figures, so that any one can read. It is a sure and systematic way of saving money for your own use or support in later years. Saving is largely a matter of habit. And the semi-compulsory feature cultivates that saving habit. For the contracts issued by the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, any the protection afforded is unsurpassed.

PREFACE

The third issue of the American Jewish Year Book has, in common with its predecessors, a calendar and certain statistical matter. It differs from that of previous years in devoting no space whatever to directories, and in laying special stress upon the history of the Jews in Roumania, whose unrelenting persecution by the Government has produced a condition of affairs which will inevitably bring about a considerable migration to the United States, unless the signatories to the Berlin Treaty will exercise their right under the Treaty, and compel Roumania to deal fairly by her Jewish subjects.

Readers of the Year Book who desire to consult a directory are referred to the volume for 5661, and in the first issue they will find a bibliography of Jewish periodicals published in the United States, which has not since been repeated.

The list of references to Jewish books and articles published during the year is on a larger scale than that in the last issue, and it is hoped that its usefulness has been increased by the addition of explanatory and descriptive notes. The statistical material gathered last year has been condensed into summaries which show the communal activities of the various States in the Union.

Little progress has been made in arriving at correct figures for the Jewish population of the United States, and the plan of sending out circulars and securing estimates seems well-nigh hopeless. Within the next year it is expected that a series of investigations will be entered upon which promise to yield more accurate results with regard to the Jewish population of this country than have heretofore been obtained.

To Miss Henrietta Szold, Secretary to the Publication Committee, I wish to express my profound thanks for her valued aid.

is called 662 (תרסב) according to the short system (לפ"ק). It is a defective Leap Year of 13 months, 55 Sabbaths, 383 days, beginning on Saturday, the seventh day of the week, with the first day of Passover on Tuesday, the third day of the week; therefore its sign is זחג. It is the last year of the 298th lunar cycle of 19 years, and the 6th of the 203d solar cycle of 28 years, since the Creation.

In the year 5661 there was no occurrence of supreme importance by which to characterize either the internal history of the Jewish people or their relations to the world at large, yet it is rendered notable by several features which stand out prominently.

Of greatest significance probably is the methodical work undertaken by the Jewish Colonization Association, which at present is unquestionably the most important single factor in Jewry, bearing within itself the possibility of far-reaching influence upon the future of the Jewish people as long as the world may endure.

The appearance of the first volume of the Jewish Encyclopædia marks the beginning of an enterprise which, if carried to a successful conclusion, will probably do more to make Jews known to themselves and to the world at large than all other attempts which have preceded it.

The reception by the Sultan of Turkey of Doctor Herzl and his associates, and the decorations bestowed upon them, though their real meaning has not been made known, may be taken as an evidence of the present Sultan's friendliness, in some form, toward the projects of the Zionist leaders, with regard to certain Turkish dominions.

The situation of the Jews in Roumania, whose distress becomes more acute, and the problems arising out of possible migratory movements from that country, are the gravest questions before the Jews of the world, and for that reason a considerable proportion of the space in this volume is given up to a discussion of the Roumanian question.

THE UNITED STATES

The Encyclopædia can hardly be called an American work, it is really international in character, having its collaborators in all parts of the world; but the fact that its publication was undertaken by a firm in New York and that its management is largely in the hands of American scholars, has made it, in a certain sense, an American enterprise. There has not yet been time for detailed criticism of the first volume, but its appearance has elicited much interest, and the initial reception is distinctly favorable. It is the capital event in the history of Jewish learning in America, and may have far-reaching results.

At only two points of importance were the Jews of the United States as such concerned specifically with public affairs. In the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts a bill was presented to allow observers of the Seventh Day Sabbath to work on Sunday, but it was finally defeated, part of the opposition, strangely enough, coming from a Rabbi; and the attempt to secure the removal of the word "Christian," as qualifying benevolence, from the Bill of Rights of the State of Virginia, was also unsuccessful.

The two Theological Institutions, at Cincinnati and New York, have been seeking funds whereby to strengthen their respective faculties, with fair success. At the moment of writing it seems likely that a sufficient endowment fund will be secured for the New York Seminary, to render possible the election of a successor to Dr. Morais as President of the Faculty and reconstitute the governing body, which has been without a president since the death of Joseph Blumenthal; and the Cincinnati College, through gifts and a bequest, has been placed upon a fairly permanent basis.

The second convention of the Orthodox Union and the meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis were without unusual incident, save that both were the subject of unfavorable criticism from their friends. Lewis N. Dembitz declares the Orthodox Union ineffectual, and both the American Israelite and the Reform Advocate are dissatisfied with portions of the proceedings of the Central Conference. An attempted Conference of Southern Rabbis failed.

Two educational institutions, the National Farm School and the Gratz College, sent forth their first graduates.

For good or ill, philanthropic work is being more and more methodized. Philadelphia has "federated" her charity system, and Baltimore is following suit.

A Jewish Exhibition, to be held in New York in 1902, is being organized by the American Jewish Historical Society. Fifty-seven periodical publications of all natures and degrees were currently issued in the United States, and sixteen synagogues and five homes of societies dedicated.

The United States has witnessed an exceptional year in its history, politically and commercially, and seems at a bound to have taken its place among the greatest nations of the earth. The Jewish community has participated in the fever of expansion; and, like the rest of the nation, is suffering from an attack of overconfidence. Born of such a feeling, no doubt, is the scheme for a Jewish University, which, though put forward with much detail, is not known to have any real support, nor is it likely to be realized.

ENGLAND

English Jewry has been largely concerned with the great events stirring the Empire: the death of Queen Victoria, the accession of King Edward, and the war in South Africa.

To the deputation of English Jews to congratulate the King upon his accession, he used the expression: "It will always be my care to maintain and promote the extension of equal liberty to all races and denominations among my subjects," weighty words for a ruler of a country which still recognizes an Established Church, and which numbers among its subjects adherents of every faith and representatives of many races.

The Bi-centenary of Bevis Marks, the Jewish Census, the renewed interest in the study of Hebrew revealed in an active discussion as to the best methods to be employed, the increase of interest in Jewish education as shown by the collection of £13,000 for the Jews' Free School at a single dinner, and of £14,000 for the Jewish Industrial School upon a similar occasion, are among the significant events of the year.

The very extraordinary "Four Epistles to the Jews of England," by Dr. Schechter, have excited much comment, and rightly, since they deal plainly with elementary questions at all times agitating Jews in the dispersion, and which, because of exceptional conditions in the British Empire, are immediately present to the Jews of England.

THE CONTINENT OF EUROPE

On the continent of Europe it can be said with pleasure that in the main the outlook is brighter than it has been for several years, always excepting, of course, Russia and Roumania, but the recrudescence of mediævalism, which swept over France and Austria, and appeared in spots even in Germany, has subsided.

France has again been tranquillized. The general amnesty bill putting an end to all proceedings growing out of the Dreyfus affair, and the Associations Bill forbidding the presence of educational corporations in France controlled by foreigners or in foreign countries, are conclusive evidence that the Republican party, through its present ministers, has secured firm control, and that neither the army nor the reactionary clericals are feared. This has in turn brought about a better state of affairs in Algeria. The new governors of Algeria, two of whom have held office within a year, have both discountenanced anti-Semitic agitation, and have snubbed the anti-Semitic mayor, Max Régis, who was defeated for the Chamber of Deputies, and more lately has resigned the mayoralty. One Jewish officer, Samuel Paul Naquet Laroque, Colonel of Artillery, was promoted to be General of Brigade. It is evident that the extreme caution exercised during the past few years is no longer necessary, as witnessed by the fact that an attack made upon the Jews in the Chamber of Deputies was resented by the Chief Rabbi of France, who sent a strong letter to the President of the Chamber.

Paris is again apparently regaining its central position in the Jewish world, due to greater activity on the part of the Alliance, and still more, probably, to its being the virtual seat of government of the Jewish Colonization Association, and it is there that several international conferences have been held to consider the Roumanian question.

German nationalism, reacting upon the Jews of Germany, is probably responsible for the formation of the "Hilfsverein der deutschen Juden," to take the place of the active propaganda hitherto made for the Alliance in Germany. The general preponderance of conservative feeling among the Jews of Berlin is shown by the fact that at a meeting of the representatives of the community, two propositions for Sunday service, one for a religious service, and the other for a simple religious lecture, were defeated.

The death of Baron Willy von Rothschild, of Frankfort, scholar, financier, and man of great piety and many good works, involving, as it does, the disappearance of the famous Frankfort house of Rothschild, is notable. The city of Frankfort benefited by his death in the bequest of one million marks and by the gift from Mr. George Speyer of a similar amount.

The Prussian Government shows an occasional sign of hostility, as in the discrimination of the matter of appointment of notaries, and one municipality, that of Potsdam, has prohibited the killing of animals according to the Jewish rite, in the public abattoir.

Italy is the especially favored country, where the happy condition prevails that the Jews have had no history. The most noteworthy events have been the appointment of Senor Leone Wollemborg as a member of the Cabinet with the Portfolio of Finance, and the dedication of a great new synagogue in Rome. The Italian Government was the only one to enter a public protest with the Porte against the restrictions laid upon foreign Jews traveling in Palestine. The ambassador asserted that for his Government "there existed only Italian subjects without distinction of creed."

In Austria, the anti-Semitic party lost distinct ground in Parliamentary elections, and just as definite is the decline of anti-Semitism in Vienna.

Roumania is so fully treated elsewhere that nothing need be said here except that conditions show no improvement.

As for Russia, where at least one-half of all the Jews of the world reside, the most significant fact is the almost impenetrable darkness which surrounds important events during the year—the outside world is practically in ignorance of conditions there. The agitation among students and workingmen which, according to some brief reports, was of the greatest moment, and by others has been minimized into a mere trifle, was supposed at one time to indicate the growth of a more liberal sentiment, at least among the inhabitants of St. Petersburg. This was accentuated by the news that the performance of an anti-Semitic play had been violently objected to by the audience in the theatre, and here and there, too, have been occasional indications of more favorable treatment on the part of the authorities. The very considerable body of Jewish soldiers who went to China with the Russian troops were the recipients of special words of praise from General Bortianoff, but on the heels of this come two announcements—the decree that the Government will hereafter limit the number of Jewish students in Russian universities to three per cent. of the total, except in the University of Moscow, where they are entirely prohibited, and the publication of a secret rescript from the War Office appointing a commission to deal with all cases of friction between the Jews and the military, the trials to be by court-martial. As if the horrors of Government were not sufficient, there has been added a serious famine in Southern Russia, with many thousands of people in actual distress.

The communities heretofore cut off have attracted more than usual attention, and the proposition has been made in Germany to send a commission to the Falashas of Abyssinia, and at Shanghai there has been formed a society for the rescue of Chinese Jews, and active communication has been entered into with the remnants of the colony at Kai-Fung-Foo.

The colonists in Argentina are fairly prosperous, and their number is steadily increasing under the auspices of the Colonization Association. The Dutch Government appointed Mr. Tobias M. C. Asser a member of the Dutch Section of the International Arbitration Commission, and the Shah of Persia has selected a Karaite Jew as tutor for his son.

THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE

In this survey there remains but a single general topic to consider, that relating to the Jews, present or prospective, in the Ottoman Empire. The good-will of the Sultan to some of his Jewish officials was shown, on the occasion of the celebration of his Jubilee, by the bestowal of one of the highest orders known in the Empire upon Daoud Effendi Molko, First Dragoman of the Imperial Divan, and later by a concession to the Jews who have been settled in the Holy Land for some time, to hold agricultural land in their own name, which had heretofore been denied them.

The only untoward event reported was the great fire at Hasskeui, a distinctly Jewish quarter in Constantinople, which rendered over two thousand persons homeless. The dedication of a German Jewish synagogue, with a seating capacity of 1500, marks the growth of emigration of Ashkenazim partly from Russia, principally from Austro-Hungary, into what has been in modern times the most important stronghold of the Sephardim.

The vintage of the Jewish Colonies in Palestine was very satisfactory, but in the fall there was much distress in Jerusalem due to smallpox and typhus, later to the drought and inadequacy of the water supply.

Two Jerusalem Jews, both with missions of a public nature, have visited the Jewish communities of the West. Mr. D. Yellin came to secure support for a building for the Central Library of Jerusalem, and M. Nissim Béhar, head of the Technical School of the Alliance in Jerusalem, is on a more extended trip to make propaganda for the Alliance. Both have met with encouragement and success.

The Zionist movement has proceeded on the lines of previous years, strengthening itself in various countries by better methods of organization and by adopting the "culture" program in addition to that of simple agitation for the original Zionist propositions. The acerbity of tone in the discussion has in the main departed, though to a certain extent it has not been eliminated in England, due to the injection of the Zionist question into the general elections in October last. In December, what appeared to be a very important pronouncement was given out by Youssouf Bey Krieger, a Jewish Turkish official, for more than twenty years Secretary Interpreter to the Government of Palestine, who declared Zionism impracticable and injurious to Jews now living in the Ottoman Empire. This statement from such a source had considerable weight in many quarters, but it was entirely overshadowed by the audience accorded Dr. Theodor Herzl and two of his associates by the Sultan of Turkey, together with the announcement that Dr. Herzl had received marks of favor from the Sultan. In Zionist quarters much hope was derived from this incident, and rightly, since an audience with the Sultan of Turkey is not easily obtained, nor had the Sultan any apparent reason to grant marks of favor to these men except for the distinct purpose of giving the world the impression that he held no unfavorable disposition to their projects.

During the last year, Dr. Herzl's utterances have been marked by greater sobriety of tone. In an address delivered at a Maccabean banquet, he confessed that he should not now make the almost definite statements given out by him at the great meeting in the East End of London in 1898, when his hearers got the impression that some actual step looking to the practical realization of the Zionist program was to be expected in the immediate future.

The year 5661 has witnessed several events of favorable import to the Jews of the world, and practically no retrogression.

AUGUST 15, 1901.

THE JEWS OF ROUMANIA

FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE PRESENT DAY

BY DR. E. SCHWARZFELD

The history of the Jews of Roumania, or, to put it more correctly, of the Roumanian principalities, has not yet been written; nor will it be written in the near future; for no chronicles or accounts of any kind have been handed down by earlier generations; and it was only with some difficulty that a few Hebrew documents of secondary importance and of comparatively recent date were brought to light. This strange condition is without doubt due to the numberless scourges with which the country was afflicted—unceasing wars between neighboring powers, intestine feuds, periodic invasions of the Tartars and the Cossacks, recurring conflagrations, which destroyed whole cities one after the other, famine, and plague, and the intolerable exactions of the princes and the boyars, who forced the population to seek refuge in the forests and the mountains, and sometimes in neighboring countries.

The question arises how the Jews could continue to exist in these countries, in the face of so many hardships. But for the inherent tenacity of the race and the comparative tolerance which they enjoyed, they must certainly have given way.

The Roumanian chroniclers, occupying themselves solely with the wars and the intestine conflicts, and with the relation of the prince to the boyars, paid no attention to the Jews, and made only the barest mention of them in certain passages. Moreover, the official documents were for the most part destroyed in the conflagrations; and those which escaped destruction are still hidden away in the archives. Some few documents have appeared in rare collections, or in literary and political magazines; and it is to these sources, the collections and the magazines, as well as to the accounts of travelers, that the writer must resort to compile a sketch, however brief, of the history of the Jews in the Roumanian principalities.

I

If some historians may be believed, Jews lived in Roumanian territory as early as at the time of the Dacians. They say that after the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jews by Titus, Decebalus received Jews into his country, and assigned to them the city of Talmus or Talmaci on the border of Transylvania, generally known under the name of the Rothethurm. Other Roumanian historians contest this fact, because the word Talmus is by some derived from the Talmud, which did not exist at that time. The argument is weak. A false interpretation of the name of a place does not necessarily imply that the history of the place is unauthentic.

However that may be, it is admitted that Jews inhabited Dacia after its conquest by the Romans; for it is an established fact that many Jews followed the Roman legions in their triumphal marches across the continent, as purveyors to the army, and that they settled in the countries favorable to their trade. Moreover, Jews had lived in the places scattered along the shore of the Black Sea a long time before the Christian era, and after the dispersion their number increased. Gradually, the Jews penetrated into the interior of the countries. Some of the coast cities later formed an integral part of Wallachia and Moldavia.

In the eighth century the Khozars, a people partly Finn and partly Tartar, who had become converted to Judaism, made their appearance in southern Russia. Soon they extended their conquests in the east of Europe as far as Pannonia, and traces of them still exist in the Roumanian principalities and in Transylvania, a number of places bearing the names Jidova, Jidovchitza, etc. The Khozars left a strong impress also on Roumanian poetry and tradition, in which "Jew" is synonymous with "giant" or "hero," an epithet which can date only from the time of the Khozars.

At an early period, too, Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland, and the principality of Kiew, all adjacent to and enclosing Moldavia and Wallachia, were inhabited by Jews. The shortest and most frequented route for those countries in their traffic with one another naturally lay through Moldavia and Wallachia, and at least part of this traffic was in the hands of the Jews. There is no doubt that they inhabited, since its foundation, the principality of Berlad, which, in the twelfth century, included the commercial cities of Little Halicz (Galatz) and Tecuci, under the dominion of a Galician prince. In addition, it is certain that they inhabited places in the northern part of Moldavia and in Bessarabia, in which there were Wallachians as early as the twelfth and the beginning of the thirteenth century. The Jews also lived in the banat (domain) of Severin, which was under Hungarian suzerainty.

II

There is no doubt that Tugomir Basarab, known as Radu Negru (Rudolf the Black), was followed by the Jews when he left Transylvania, crossed the Carpathians in search of a new country, and founded Wallachia in 1290. This is the explanation given to the statements of the chroniclers, who say that Radu Negru, duke of Amlash and Fogarash, left the country with a large following of Roumanians, Catholics, Saxons, and all sorts of individuals, in order to found a new state. Another immigration of Jews into Wallachia took place at the beginning of the reign of Vladislav Basarab, between 1365 and 1367, when they were driven from Hungary by Louis the Great. Many of them came to Wallachia, and were well received by Vladislav, who assigned to them the town of Turnu. According to some historians, Turnu was built by the Jews. They made it a commercial centre from which they reached all the Danubian countries.

When the principality of Moldavia was founded (1348 or 1349), Jews were already living there, at least in certain localities. At the moment of its appearance on the scene of history, Moldavia came under the suzerainty of Poland; and immediately thereafter it accorded facilities and privileges to the Polish traders, the greater number of whom were Jews. In order to people the towns and villages, privileges were granted to all invited to settle there. When Roman I (1391-1394) founded the city bearing his name, Jews took up their abode in it, doubtless the first to do so. Roman I and his son Alexander the Good (1401-1433) issued decrees permitting the Jews of Roman and the rest of the country to establish themselves wherever they chose and to pursue any kind of trade or industry. They were exempted from military service, and all that was asked of them was the payment of three Loewenthaler a person. These decrees were confirmed by the successors of Roman and Alexander.

Information concerning the Jews of Wallachia during the fifteenth century is very scanty, especially as the history of the principality itself is wrapped in obscurity. The Jews were for the most part traders, and the commerce of the country was principally conducted through their agency. They shared the lot of the whole population, who were subjected to the caprice and the despotism of the princes succeeding each other on a slippery throne. The reign of Vlad Tzepesh (= the Impaler), 1456-1462, was particularly baleful. He was a veritable monster of cruelty, who took pleasure in the cries and tears of his victims—gypsies, Turks, pagans, and Jews. He hacked them into bits, or crammed them into great pots with a hole in the lid, through which he poured boiling water, or he impaled them on their sides—all, as he said, out of zeal for the Christian faith. Every one suffered at his hands, boys, girls, men, women, old and young. During his second reign (1476), he seized Turkish Jews who came to the country on business, imprisoned them, and demanded their whole fortune as a ransom; and if any would not or could not pay a ransom, he put out their eyes or cut off their ears or hands.

The Moldavian princes displayed more wisdom, and treated the Jews with favor. Under Stephen the Great (1457-1504) they traded freely, even at Suchava, the capital of the principality, where they made large profits in their traffic with cattle. They also negotiated the ransom of captive Christians. They willingly paid the war taxes in money and in produce, and rendered many services to the prince, whose reign was one constant warfare against the neighboring peoples. Isaac ben Benjamin Shor, a Jew of Jassy, was steward to the prince. He was even raised to the rank of Logothete (chancellor), and held the same position under Bogdan (1504-1517), the son and successor of Stephen. Before his death Stephen was cared for by a Jew, the physician of the khan of the Tartars, and Bogdan acknowledged the Jew's services by sending him back to his master after Stephen's death, while detaining against his will an Italian physician who had also attended Stephen.

It is probable that many Jews settled in Moldavia in 1498, when Stephen, after his incursion into Poland, carried away with him one hundred thousand prisoners in order to establish them in his own country. The treaty of commerce concluded with the king of Poland in April, 1499, expressly stipulated that the traders be allowed to carry on commerce in the two countries freely.

III

With the sixteenth century came new immigrations, composed of Polish and Turkish Jews. The religious dissensions which broke out in Poland at the beginning of the century encouraged the Jews to make proselytes, and they sent the converted Christians into Moldavia and Wallachia in order not to bring upon them the hatred of the Christians. These proselytes formed an addition to the voluntary immigrants. Other immigrants came from Turkey. Wallachia had fallen under the suzerainty of Turkey at the end of the fourteenth century, and in 1513 Moldavia shared the same fate. This was exactly at the time when the Jews of Turkey began to play an important rôle in the State and to gain diplomatic influence at the court, in the harems, and with the pashas and the grand viziers; and the princes of Moldavia and Wallachia turned to these influential Jews to obtain the throne or to strengthen themselves in possession. Commerce with Turkey was extended, and the Jews of Constantinople and other places frequently visited the principalities. Many established themselves there permanently. But the situation of the Jews varied with the prince, and depended upon the favor which he obtained from an influential Jew or Jewess at Constantinople.

In Moldavia Bogdan (1504-1517), following in the footsteps of his father, treated the Jews kindly; but his successor, Stephen the Young, accorded privileges to Christian merchants of Lemberg to the detriment of the Jews, whose influence he wished to weaken (1522). When Peter Raresch was driven from his throne, he was helped back to it again, in 1541, by a Jewess, the confidante of the mother of the Sultan, who even advanced him a sum of money. This did not prevent him from seizing the horses of Jewish traders; and his successors did not fail to imitate him in this respect whenever they were short of money. He also imprisoned many of the Polish merchants in order to extort money from them. The exactions of Alexander Lapushneanu (1552-1561), a cruel tyrant, were so severe that the Jews uttered shouts of joy when he was dethroned by Jacob Hieraklides, despot of islands in the Ægean, whose reign was favorable to the Jews. In spite of his ill-treatment of the Jews, Alexander Lapushneanu obtained a gift of ten thousand ducats from Joseph, Duke of Naxos, to help him in getting back his throne (1563). During his second reign he seems not to have molested the Jews to the same extent.

The orthodox clergy, usually less unfriendly, and very often favorable to the Jews, assumed a hostile attitude in the reign of John the Terrible. They oppressed them, extorted money from them, and placed them under the ban. The bishop of Roman ordered them to be expelled from the city and to be burned in the cemetery on Purim, 1574; but they were saved by Isaiah ben Joseph, secretary of the prince; and the prince granted them the right to have an official to represent them before the provincial authorities of the country.

Peter the Lamé (1574-1579), emboldened by the support of Saitan Oglu Cantacuzene, who was a rival of the Duke of Naxos, pitilessly exploited all the inhabitants, and did not spare the Jews. He put a heavy tax upon the wines transported through Moldavia (1578), the trade in which was for the greater part in the hands of the Jews; and in order to rid himself of the Jewish cattle dealers from Poland, he decreed their expulsion from the country. He was dethroned shortly after, in 1579; but assumed the throne again in 1582, through the help of the physician Benvenisti, who went so far as to have one of his rivals maimed in 1584. Benvenisti's help as well as the increasing influence of Solomon Ashkenazi seems to have made Peter the Lamé more prudent in his conduct toward the Jews.

There is little information concerning the Jews of Wallachia during this time. The secretary of Alexander Mircha (1567-1577) was Isaiah ben Joseph, whom he dismissed, probably in 1573, in consequence of intrigues conducted by the Duke of Naxos to dethrone Alexander and put himself in his place. Isaiah ben Joseph then entered the service of John the Terrible in Moldavia.

While the Duke of Naxos was intriguing without success to obtain the throne of Wallachia, Solomon Ashkenazi succeeded in placing on the throne of Moldavia a prince of Jewish extraction, Emanuel Aaron, a natural son of a Moldavian prince. Although Aaron was a good Christian, he was branded by the chroniclers as the most cruel of tyrants.

The end of the sixteenth century was marked by massacres of the Jews in the two principalities. The princes of Moldavia, Wallachia, and Transylvania allied themselves under Austrian influence. In 1594 Michael the Brave of Wallachia assembled his creditors, Turks, Greeks, and Jews, and had them all massacred; and then he informed certain individuals that they all would be released from their debts. This was the signal for a general slaughter of Turks and Jews. The entire community of Bukharest perished. At the same time Emanuel Aaron had nineteen Turkish Jews put to death at Jassy. On the strength of their victories at the beginning of their campaign, both the princes, Michael and Emanuel Aaron, massacred the Jews wherever their armies passed—the Wallachian, at Giurgewo, Rustchuk, Braila, and Plevna; and the Moldavian, at Kilia, Bender, and Ismail. The Jews left Wallachia with most of the inhabitants; but in Moldavia they were soon after delivered through the fall of Aaron and the accession of Jeremiah Movila, a creature of the king of Poland. The Jews could once more breathe freely; in fact, a new immigration took place. The Polish army which established itself in Moldavia in order to protect its master's protégé, was accompanied by Jewish purveyors. Nevertheless, the Jews of Soroca were massacred by the Cossacks, who made a raid on the town, and led men, women, and children into captivity and slavery. The purveyors of the army suffered also at the hands of the Moldavian people, who profited by the victorious entrance of Michael the Brave to rob them of their cattle. Even the native Jews were soon forced to leave the country for a time in consequence of Tartar incursions and the plague, which broke out at Roman, Bakau, Piatra, Neamtz, and Suchava.

IV

The accession of Stephen Tomsha (1611-1615) was propitious to the Jews of Moldavia. His treaty with Poland assured them entire commercial liberty; and in 1614 he invited the Jews of Lemberg and probably of other places to settle in Moldavia. He excused and explained the decree of expulsion issued against them by Peter the lame.

Under the successors of Michael the Brave, the Jews returned to Wallachia, and led a tranquil existence there; but they were far from attaining to the number and importance of the Jews of Moldavia. With difficulty traces of them are found at long intervals during the seventeenth century. The Greeks and the Armenians, more numerous, monopolized commerce as well as the trades, and the legislation of Matthew Basarab bears witness to the inferior condition of the Jews.

In Moldavia the reign of Basil the Wolf (1634-1653) was favorable to the Jews; and they probably would have been happy but for the insurrection of the Cossacks against the Poles. Basil the Wolf had kept in touch with Constantinople. Early in his career he seems to have had connection with the Dr. Cohen who in 1656 was sent by the Porte to Moldavia in order to negotiate peace with the king of Sweden. In 1660 Dr. Cohen became physician to Basil the Wolf at Constantinople, where the prince lived after his fall. The code decreed by Basil the Wolf shows that a considerable degree of protection was accorded the Jews; it lacks all signs of hostility towards them. It is true, he granted facilities to converts, but the high opinion he had of Jewish physicians made him attach great importance to their testimony. Traders enjoyed perfect security, and the law protected all others equally with the Christians. The insurrection of the Cossacks, however, was as disastrous to the Moldavian as to the Polish Jews. An especially severe attack was the incursion into Moldavia in 1650. They pillaged, and sacked, and sowed terror among the Jewish population. The Jews of Jassy were treated with such cruelty that all must have perished but for the intervention of the Patriarch of Antioch, who was passing through the city. The Cossacks shut them up in the towers, and tortured them night and day in order to make them reveal the place where their treasures were hidden. Even when the Cossacks entered Jassy as friends, in the train of Timush, son of Chmelnitzky, who came to marry the daughter of Basil the Wolf (1652), the Jews were forced to hide themselves; for if the Cossacks caught a Jew, he had to ransom himself with a good round sum in cash.

In Wallachia Matthew Basarab (1633-1654) encouraged the baptism of the Jews, and conferred high dignities on converts. One of these was appointed Porter of the Court. The codes which he decreed in 1640 and 1652 were not favorable to the Jews, except in the part which was modeled after the code of Basil the Wolf: all the other parts are in the spirit of the middle ages and of the Councils of the Church Fathers. The Jew was treated like a leper or as though pest-ridden. No one might approach him, or come in contact with him, or sit with him at the same table, or touch the objects which he touched. The Christian might spit upon the Passover bread; he was forbidden to consult a Jewish physician; the testimony of a Jew, except that of a physician, was refused; and his conversion was encouraged.

But little is known concerning the situation of the Jews under the successors of Matthew Basarab. They engaged in commerce, and in the making and the sale of brandy, and some practiced medicine. Under Constantine Brancovean (1689-1714) a Jew, surnamed "the saltpetre maker," furnished the prince with powder for the army. The Jews constituted a corporation with a provost at their head. At Bukharest, and probably in the other cities, they were confined to certain quarters, and paid more taxes than any other body of people in the city. They were not compelled to wear a special garb, but the color of their clothes and shoes had to be black.

Although the condition of the Jews in Moldavia was better, their religion was not officially recognized. For the erection or rebuilding of their synagogues they had to obtain the authorization of the princes; the synagogues had to be made of wood, and be built on side streets at a certain distance from churches; and the Jews paid higher taxes than any other corporation. Nevertheless, they enjoyed commercial and industrial liberty; commerce and the petty trades were for the most part in their hands. The Russian and the Polish Jews continually traversed the routes leading across the country to Turkey. They traded in cattle, horses, honey, and wine, imported manufactured articles from Germany, and also farmed large estates. They left the practice of usury to the Turks, the Greeks, and the Moldavians.

V

With the beginning of the eighteenth century the condition of the principalities underwent a great change. From the end of the seventeenth century the princes became fragile instruments in the hands of the pashas, who appointed and recalled them at will in order to extort as much money as possible from them. To satisfy the increasing desires of the pashas and the harem at Constantinople, the princes pressed the people; but when their exactions became unbearable, they were deposed. Often they were transferred from the one principality to the other, or, after an interval, they were restored to the same throne. Some princes were appointed and deposed six times within a short period. It is difficult to follow their actions amid all these revolutions and to obtain a distinct idea of the situation of the Jews.

On April 5, 1710, the Jews of Neamtz (Moldavia) were accused of ritual murder. Given the cue by a renegade Jew, some Christians killed a Christian child on Passover eve, and threw the body into the courtyard of the old synagogue. The next day the people, with the renegade Jew at their head, attacked the Jews, killed five of them, and pillaged without restraint.

Twenty-two Jews were imprisoned by order of the parcalab (prefect). A Jewish deputation waited on the prince at Jassy; an investigation was made, the charge was found to be false, the Jews were set free, and the guilty punished.

In 1714 the same false charge was made at Roman. Some Poles abducted a Christian girl, a servant in a Jewish house, and the master was arrested. The mob plundered Jewish houses, two Jews were hanged, and the others would not have escaped massacre, if a Pole had not given information of the rape and led to the finding of the girl.

In Wallachia it was the prince himself who arraigned the Jews. Stephen Cantacuzene (1714-1716), in order to obtain the people's pardon for his exactions, donned the religious mask, and in 1715 caused the synagogue at Bukharest, situated in a retired corner of the city, to be torn down. The Jewish provost was killed in the riot that broke out on the occasion. It was only through great sacrifices that the Jews obtained permission to rebuild the synagogue and resume their religious practices.

The successor of Stephen Cantacuzene, Nicholas Mavrocordatos (1716-1730), a cultivated and enlightened man, healed the wounds which the attitude of Cantacuzene had caused the Jews. He invited to Bukharest a Jewish banker, Celebi Mentesh Bally, whom he overwhelmed with favors, and exempted from taxation, but he was most closely connected with the physician and diplomat, Dr. Fonseca. Dr. Fonseca had been the physician of the Sultan, and the intimate friend of the French ambassadors at Constantinople; and in 1719 he went to Bukharest as physician to Mavrocordatos. He aided the prince with his counsel, and his influence was so great that it aroused the rancor of the Austrian internuncio at Constantinople.

During his reign in Moldavia (1714) Nicholas Mavrocordatos succeeded in keeping the people in check, and he punished the guilty persons who had reopened the question of ritual murder; but there was frank hostility to the Jews on the part of Michael Racovitza, who succeeded to the throne in 1716, occupying it for the third time from 1716 to 1726. Once when a church was being erected at Olasheni, the authorities seized the necessary building materials from the Jews by force. Racovitza was the type of a cruel and oppressive ruler, and history stigmatizes him as a repugnant personality. In order to extort money from the Jews he took advantage of the murder of a child by some rascals at Onitzkani to accuse the Jews of ritual murder. The Jew charged with being the author of the crime protested in vain. He was led to Jassy, and maltreated and tortured in the presence of the prince. The bastinado was administered to the so-called accomplices, the synagogues were destroyed, and the rolls of the Law were burned. Finally, after having extorted enormous sums from the Jews, Racovitza set his victims free. In consequence of the complaints which they lodged against him at Constantinople, Racovitza was removed and thrown into prison. Nicholas Mavrocordatos and Gregory Ghika, both aspirants to the Moldavian throne, contributed to his downfall. Later, he succeeded in having himself appointed in Wallachia (1730-1731), but, taught by experience, he did not oppress the Jews more than he oppressed his other subjects.

Gregory Ghika, who succeeded him in Moldavia (1727-1733), was more tolerant; and one of his successors, Matthew Ghika (1753-1756), seems to have been entirely well-disposed towards the Jews. He was very fond of amusements, and took pleasure in the dancing of certain Jewesses whom he invited to his court.

John Mavrocordatos in Moldavia (1744-1747) was the type of a dissipated and debauched prince, who passes his time in orgies. At the end of his reign he carried with him the curses of the people. His entanglement with a Jewish farmer of a village in the district of Suchava is a matter of history. He ravished the man's wife, daughter, and sister-in-law, and when the Jew complained at Constantinople, John Mavrocordatos had him hung. This aroused the anger of the pashas, and cost the prince his throne.

VI

Under Constantine Mavrocordatos, who occupied the throne of Wallachia four times and that of Moldavia (1730-1763) six times, the Jews led a peaceful existence. He decreed reforms which show his desire to promote the welfare of the lowly and the humble. The charter promulgated by him in Moldavia, in 1741, granted the Jews the same protection as the rest of the people. Their homes were to be inviolable; lodgers were not to be quartered upon them without due payment; no claim was to be made upon them for their bedding, for their plate, for post horses, or for any kind of sustenance, under penalty of a fourfold compensation; they might settle in all the cities and villages, and follow whatever craft or trade they chose; and they could appeal directly to the prince against any injustice. At the same time, they as little as the 'Turks could employ Christian servants under thirty years of age, and Jewish women as well as Christian women might not sell spirituous drinks.

Although the terms of the charter were never literally executed, its good effects made themselves felt. The Jews lived in all the cities, villages, and market-towns of Moldavia, and their activity was perceptible everywhere. Many went to Hotin at the border of Moldavia and Poland, with leather belts, embroideries, textile fabrics, and carpets, and brought back furs from Russia. Others exported cattle, saffron, cotton, carpets, dates, and other fruits as far as Breslau and Frankfort, and imported silver and merchandise. The Jews were engaged in all the crafts; the cultivation of the land was in their hands; the wayside inns on the main routes of travel belonged to them, and, according to the travelers, these were the only places which offered comfortable quarters. The best houses in the cities were those of the Jews, and they were chosen for lodging distinguished guests.

Gregory Alexander Ghika (1764-1767), however, expelled them from the rural districts, and forbade their renting inns or land. It is true, he authorized the Jews to repopulate the city of Tirgu-Frumos; but his ill-will toward the Jews encouraged the population of Roman to accuse them of having profaned a church, though the crime was actually committed by three Hungarian Christians. The people fell upon the Jews, and would have massacred them, if the guilty persons had not been discovered in time.

His namesake, Alexander Ghika, who reigned in Wallachia (1766-1769), at the advice of Ephraim, Patriarch of Jerusalem, destroyed the second synagogue erected at Bukharest. In addition, the Patriarch, who was on his way through the city, pronounced his anathema against the Jews.

The Russo-Turkish war (1769-1774) brought sad times to the Jews of the principalities. After massacring the Jews of Uman, the Cossacks advanced as far as Balta-Roumania, and demanded the Polish Jews who had taken refuge there. When the Turkish garrison refused to give them up, the Cossacks murdered the garrison along with the Jewish population. The Russians entered Moldavia; and the Russian and Turkish soldiers vied with each other in making exactions and in pillaging. Jews and Christians fled the country, those who remained enduring the maltreatment of the janizaries. At Botoshani the rabbi fell a victim to their brutality. At Bukharest the people, taking advantage of the disorder induced by the Turks, fell upon the Jews (1770), who took refuge with the boyars. A Jewish woman seized by the mob saw her children slaughtered before her eyes, and this at her own request rather than let them be baptized. It was during the Russian occupation that the first anti-Jewish pamphlet appeared at Jassy in 1771. It is a Roumanian translation of the Opus Aureum of Samuel Maroccanus, written in Arabic in the fourteenth century.

Tranquillity was not restored in the principalities until nearly the end of 1774, when peace was concluded. Alexander Ypsilante was appointed in Wallachia (1774-1782), and Gregory Alexander Ghika for the second time in Moldavia (1774-1777).

The code of Ypsilante contains no restrictions upon the Jews except in regard to their testimony against Christians. Nevertheless, he destroyed the synagogue which the Jews had built at Bukharest during the Russian occupation, and he granted privileges to converts, which were confirmed by his successors.

Gregory Ghika renewed his decree expelling the Jews from the villages and forbidding them to rent farms or inns. By the law which determined the functions of officials, he abolished the guild of petty dealers at the markets, thus depriving the Jews of the cities of a profitable occupation in which they had been engaged.

His successor, Constantine Moruzi (1777-1782), continued to enforce the prohibition against the settlement of the Jews in the rural districts, and in a decree issued at the secret instigation of the Porte, he forbade the importation of spirituous liquors, a severe blow to the Jews engaged in this trade.

The prohibition against the importation of spirituous liquors into Moldavia caused the boyars to erect distilleries, whose management they left to the Jews. Alexander Mavrocordatos (1782-1784) decreed the destruction of these distilleries, provided that the Jews derived the greatest profit from them. Moreover, he refused Jews the right to live in the rural districts, though he permitted them to rent farms. During his reign an accusation of ritual murder was brought at Botoshani (1783), and the prominent men of the community, the rabbis and the Dayanim, were imprisoned. They obtained justice from the council of the prince. The community decreed that Lag be-Omer, the day of their deliverance, should be a festival.

Under the successor of this prince, his namesake Alexander Mavrocordatos II (1785-1786), the Jews of Moldavia received better treatment. He had a Jewish physician who enjoyed his entire confidence.

In Wallachia, Nicholas Mavrogheni (1786-1788) was likewise well-disposed toward the Jews; and at last the Jews of Bukharest were permitted to build a second synagogue. But forced by the demands of war, the prince imposed heavy taxes upon corporations and, consequently, upon the Jews.

The Jews of Jassy were less fortunate. They had to undergo all the torments of the Russo-Turkish war. Fifteen thousand janizaries entered the city in November, 1787, drove the merchants from their shops, sold their wares, broke in the casks of wine, and killed all who offered resistance.

On the renewal of the Russo-Turkish war, in which the Austrians took part, the Russians took Ismail by storm, November, 1790, and massacred a great number of Jews, sending others as prisoners into the interior of Russia. The Austrian occupation of Wallachia was disastrous for the Jews. In consequence of the frequent requisitions made for agricultural products, the distilleries, which were almost exclusively in the hands of the Jews, could no longer be run, and many Jews were ruined. Commerce stopped, and the traders were heavily burdened with taxes. A special and severe order was given by the authorities of the districts to take a census of the Jews, including even the purveyors to the imperial army, and to impose large taxes upon them.

Under Alexander Moruzi (1793-1796) the Jews of Wallachia experienced all the severities of an oppressive ruler. Moruzi renewed the privileges of the converted Jews, destroyed the synagogue, which had been constructed on one of the principal streets of Bukharest, and inflicted the bastinado on those who defended themselves against their aggressors. He forbade the settlement of Jews at Bukharest; and the people, influenced by his acts, became so inflamed against the Jews that he was compelled to adopt protective measures, and inflicted the bastinado on a tailor who had forcibly baptized a Jewish child. At the same time Moruzi recognized the services rendered by the Jews engaged in industries. He granted privileges to a Jew by the name of Moses, who was a manufacturer of glassware; he exempted certain artisans from taxation; and he even appointed a Jew to the post of Giuvaergiu-Basha.

In Moldavia the Jews were subjected to fewer vexations. Nevertheless, Alexander Kallimachos in 1796 drove from their shops the Jews that lived about the mother church of Jassy, under the pretext that they defiled the sacred precincts. At Galatz the never-dying accusation of ritual murder was made in 1797. The Greeks attacked the Jews, beat them, pillaged their houses, killed four, threw others into the Danube, and burned the synagogue with the rolls of the Law. The Jews escaped entire destruction only through an old priest, who gathered them together, and sheltered them in his church.

In spite of the wars, and the Cossack and Tartar incursions, the pest, the floods, and the famine, the number of Jews in Wallachia and Moldavia, especially in Moldavia, increased. Whenever a calamity threatened the country, those who were in good circumstances crossed the frontier, and returned after the storm had blown over. One advantage of the wars was that the Jewish purveyors came into the country, and established themselves there, attracted by the commercial and industrial liberty which they were allowed to enjoy.

In Wallachia, during the eighteenth century, the number of Jews increased through immigrants from Hungary, Russia, and Turkey. Though they were traders, they engaged in all kinds of crafts—tailoring, shoemaking, tinning, lacemaking, working silver, making jewelry, bookbinding, engraving (in which they excelled), making pipes, and manufacturing potash and glassware. They joined the guilds of artisans and craftsmen, on an equal footing with Christians. They were also the best distillers, as such enjoying certain privileges. They rarely engaged in money changing. The people at large, however, despised and insulted them; yet they were well received by the boyars, the high dignitaries of the State, and even by the princes and the court, at which the artisans through their skill succeeded in obtaining exceptional positions, in acquiring privileges, favors, and influence, and exemption from taxation. Several princes appointed the provost of the Jews of Bukharest as Cuiungi-Basha, or grand provost of the silversmiths. In 1792 a Jew named Eleazar was made Giuvaergiu-Basha, grand provost of the jewelers. These were high positions, which conferred upon the holders a certain authority and certain judicial powers over all the members of the guild, of which they were the natural defenders.

Authors are agreed in declaring that the Jews were good husbands and fathers, seeking happiness in their families. Beneficence, practiced especially toward their kindred, was one of their virtues, and their probity was beyond question. Their religious practices often affected strangers strongly, and challenged their admiration.

The same is true of the Moldavian Jews, whom neither prayers, threats, nor bribes could move to depart from their customs.

The Jews of Moldavia exerted a still stronger influence on the social and economic condition of the country than the Jews of Wallachia. Here hindrances were frequently put in the way of their settlement, but in Moldavia the people summoned them with eagerness. Many a village and town and some cities, like Folticheni and Mihaileni, were founded or re-peopled by them or their agents in the eighteenth century.

After obtaining the authorization of the prince, the boyars, that is, proprietors of estates, generally made an agreement with certain foreign Jewish families, by which these bound themselves to people the town within a limited time, and in case the engagement was not fulfilled, to pay a severe penalty. Privileges were granted the founders and their descendants, and the land and the material for the construction of synagogues and the management of cemeteries were given them gratuitously. They were assured the independent administration of their internal affairs, and they took an active share in the communal affairs with rights equal to those of the other citizens.

They followed all the professions and crafts. There were Jewish physicians, surgeons, barbers, midwives, wholesale and retail merchants, bankers, brokers, traders in cattle, grain, tobacco, wines, fruits, skins, and fish, inn-keepers, and middlemen. Among the artisans there were Jewish clock-makers, coppersmiths, workers in hides and furs, cap and hat makers, keepers of coffee houses, shoemakers, tailors, tanners, silversmiths, jewelers, glaziers, engravers, bookbinders, butchers, housepainters, masons, drivers, lacemakers, bakers, etc. Among the manufacturers, there were distillers on a large and small scale, manufacturers of liquors, butter, glassware, potash, paper, and textile fabrics. In Wallachia the artisans were absorbed by the Christian guilds, but in Moldavia Jewish artisans formed independent organizations, each with a provost and councillors, and they were absorbed only by the great guild called the Jewish corporation.

VIII

The only Phanariot princes who openly showed themselves by their actions to be hostile to the Jews were the Moruzi. In 1799 Alexander Moruzi again mounted the throne of Wallachia. The people of Bukharest, probably encouraged by his presence, raised the charge of ritual murder, and, aided by the soldiers, attacked the Jews, spreading the rumor, whether true or false, that it was the will of the prince. They assaulted the Jews, pillaged their houses, and killed one hundred and twenty-eight persons (April 8, 1801). In this way, with veritable Sicilian Vespers, was inaugurated the nineteenth century. The prince, awed by his responsibility to Turkey, was compelled to send the instigators of the massacre to do enforced labor at the salt mines.

Soon after, Moruzi left the throne of Wallachia and ascended the throne of Moldavia. His presence immediately made itself felt. A Jew of Neamtz was accused of ritual murder (1803), and three of his coreligionists were imprisoned and tortured. On February 8, 1803, a libelous publication against the Jews, Infruntarea jidovilor ("The Insolence of the Jews"), appeared at Jassy. It was printed by the presses at the residence of the Metropolitan, with the blessing of this high dignitary of the Church, and probably with the consent of the prince. It contains the old absurd accusations and slanders, and gives silly interpretations of the customs of the Jews. The pamphlet was spread among the people; and at Jassy it provoked mob violence against the Jews, which threatened to become a massacre. The Jews were saved by the Metropolitan, who sheltered them in the court of his archiepiscopal residence. In order to increase the taxes which the Jews paid as a corporation, Moruzi had the boyars address a request to him against the overrunning of the country by the Jews (1804). In addition, he forbade Jews to rent farms (1803).

Wallachia, also, was excited by the accusation of ritual murder. The charge was carried from mouth to mouth; and to put a stop to it, Constantine Ypsilante in 1804 was forced to address a rescript to the Metropolitan, requesting him to draw up an encyclical which the priests should read from the pulpit, proclaiming that the charge is false, that the Jewish law permits no such practices, and that the accusation is an invention of the rabble seeking for a pretext to pillage the houses of Jews.

In December, 1806, war again broke out between Russia and Turkey; and the Russian troops occupied the principalities. As soon as they approached Bukharest, Ypsilante left the city, the wealthier of the residents following his example. Taking advantage of the disorder resulting from this departure, the people fell upon the Jews, penned them up, and gave them the choice between baptism and death. They were saved from their terrible plight by the entrance of the Russians.

The accusation of ritual murder, however, did not cease in Wallachia. In 1808 the Metropolitan was again forced to protest against it; in 1811 a Jew of the district of Jalowitza was imprisoned on a similar charge; and in 1815 an abortive attempt to raise the cry was made at Ploeisht.

The Russian occupation, ill-fated for the Roumanians, was still more baneful to the Jews of the two principalities. They had many vexations to undergo at the hands of the authorities and the army. Commerce was paralyzed; the traders were burdened with taxes; and the Jewish artisans were prevented from working on Christian holidays even at their own homes. At Bukharest a Christian provost was forced upon them. The Russian army made all kinds of extortionate demands, and when the Kalmucks entered Bukharest in 1812, they went through the streets inhabited by Jews, and spitted Jewish children on their lances; then roasted and ate them. In order to free themselves of these monsters the Jews offered money to their general to induce him to withdraw them from the city.

After peace was concluded, the simultaneous reigns of John Caradja in Wallachia (1812-1818) and Charles Kallimachos in Moldavia (1812-1819) were marked by the ravages of the plague in both principalities. In Wallachia, Caradja, needy and avaricious, profited by the calamity to drain money from the Jews, while accusing them of filthiness. He forbade them to employ Christian minors as servants, or to rent or buy shops in the vicinity of churches. In Moldavia, Kallimachos, kinder and more disinterested, treated them well; but the ritual murder calumny was repeated at Piatra (1816). The authorities maltreated the Jews, and extorted money from them, using the plague as a pretext.

Nevertheless, the codes issued by the two princes show that fault was found with the pocket not the person of the Jew. The code of Caradja is thoroughly mediocre. It treats of all matters and exhausts none. But it contains only one restriction against the Jews, by which they were not allowed to testify against Christians. The code of Kallimachos was drawn up on a purely civil basis, modeled after the Austrian code; but it has the one great merit of having eliminated from the Austrian code all the shameful clauses in which the Jew is regarded as a pariah. Nevertheless, Jews were forbidden to own estates or vineyards. This regulation was derived from the common law of the Mol-davians, but had never been strictly executed. By the terms of the code, the Jews enjoyed all civil rights; they could marry and divorce at will; they could give, bequeath, inherit, administer their property, and act as mandataries and as mandators, even before the law; they could buy and sell and engage in all pursuits and industries; and every community, as soon as it was recognized as such by a princely decree, constituted a legal person.

IX

In 1821 a tremendous storm broke out bringing mortal terror to the Roumanian Jews. It was the epoch of the hetæria, of the Greek revolution, when the Greeks sought to free themselves from the Turkish yoke. Some high-minded youths enrolled themselves in the ranks of the insurgents, called hetærists, but the rest were of the scum of humanity, who were forced into service if they did not join of their free will. They were undisciplined bands of plunderers, of gallows-birds, who stole, sowed destruction, and pillaged the houses of Jews. They killed and massacred those whom they met on their march to Piatra, Neamtz, Folticheni, Hertza, Fokshani, etc., and their route through Moldavia and Wallachia was flooded with Jewish blood. These wretches found assistants in the Greek monks of the Moldavian monasteries,

The entrance of the Turks put a stop to the carnage; but then the Turks and the janizaries took their turn at pillaging; on occasion they even put persons to death in spite of the strict orders of their superiors. The Jews lived in a constant state of dread; terror reigned in the two countries, especially in Moldavia. The well-to-do crossed the frontier; but the poor wandered about in the forests and the mountains. The city of Jassy, at first partially destroyed by conflagrations, was converted into a furnace of living coals before the departure of the janizaries (August, 1822). All the Jewish houses and synagogues were reduced to ashes, and thousands bewailed their vanished fortunes and lost kindred.

The reign of John Alexander Sturdza in Moldavia (1822-1828) was characterized by indecision. He treated the Jews according to the impulse of the moment, sometimes well, then again badly. Taxes were doubled, they were forbidden to engage in certain trades or to buy houses in the cities; the authorities maltreated them; and an accusation of ritual murder brought desolation to Bakau (1824). On the other hand, Sturdza permitted them to rebuild some synagogues, won their cause for them against the inhabitants of Roman, and authorized them to repeople certain villages and to found towns.

The Russo-Turkish war and the consequent Russian occupation (1826-1834) brought with it all the suffering incident to a foreign occupation, and, more than this, the plague and the cholera. The Jews on their part endured the terrible consequences; but a worse scourge for them than this was the influence of Russia. Hate and chicanery were introduced, and the spirit of exclusiveness and of persecution henceforth pervaded the legislation of the two principalities, especially of Moldavia.

The princes, Alexander Ghika (1834-1842) and George Bibescu (1842-1848), besides passing some exceptional laws, made no change in the situation of the Jews of Wallachia, and they gained in number and importance. It was not so in Moldavia. Michael Sturdza (1834-1848) had spent his whole fortune in the effort to ingratiate himself with Russia and to gain Turkey's recognition of him as prince. Now he had to fill his empty coffers, and a perpetual hunting down of the Jews began, with their purses as the final object of pursuit. The "Organic Law," a charter drawn up under the inspection of Russia, provided him with sufficient pretexts. He availed himself of its provisions, elaborated them, and invented and decreed all sorts of measures, of which the most annoying and effective was the law on vagrancy. This law was sometimes strictly executed and sometimes wholly neglected. During the fourteen years of his reign hardly a year passed but brought with it some decree to harm the Jews: the objects of their machinations were the inn-keepers of the villages; Jews were forbidden to inhabit certain streets or districts in the cities; restrictive measures were passed against merchants, peddlers, brokers, and artisans; and they were forbidden to rent certain shops or build their synagogues in certain places. These laws or decrees depended on the willingness of the Jew to unfasten his purse strings, or on the interests of the boyars. The accusation of ritual murder was brought in several places, and riots against the Jews were frequent. Hatred of them was entertained in all quarters, and to crown their ills, the abduction of a child is recorded, prototype of the Mortara case, the government taking the guilty under its protection. Yet there was need of the Jews; the boyars, with the authorization of the prince, summoned them to found and people market-towns; and at this time they established some small towns in Moldavia, which are flourishing to-day.

The revolution of 1848, which had overturned several thrones, also swept over Wallachia. The Jews took part in it, and were most worthily represented by Daniel Rosenthal, the painter, whose attachment to the revolution and the revolutionists later cost him his life. The Jews contributed to the cause in different ways, some giving up their fortunes to help the proscribed revolutionists; and at the entrance of the Turks into Bukharest they sealed their love of liberty with their life's blood.

In the struggle for the union of the two principalities, which agitated the country after the Crimean war, many Jews of Wallachia and Moldavia ranged themselves on the side of union. In Moldavia they were the scapegoats of the two parties, the unionists and the anti-unionists, each of whom wanted to attach them to its side (1857-1858).

It is an open question whether the reign of John Alexander Cuza (1859-1866), the first prince of the united principalities, was as favorable to the Jews as has been pretended. The history of the time has not yet been written, and the documents are for the most part unknown. Both anti-Jewish excesses and accusations of ritual murder took place under this prince as well as before; and decrees and circulars bearing the earmark of persecution were drawn up in his reign. Later these served as models for the governments of Prince and King Charles; and certain laws made by Cuza contain the germs of present restrictions. It is just to admit, however, that an article of the civil code promulgated in 1864 foresaw the gradual emancipation of the Jews; but, it is proper to add, the application of this clause was suspended.

X.

The organization of the Jews in Roumania merits special attention. The internal administration of their affairs did not differ greatly from that obtaining in the Jewish communities of Poland; but the same is not true of their representatives before the constituted authorities of the country. These bore titles borrowed from Poland and Turkey, but they had different functions from those of the Polish and Turkish officials of the same name.

The community was known to outsiders as the Breasla (corporation); and its most ancient representative was called the Starosté (provost), who, by the end of the sixteenth century, acquired the right to represent the community officially before the authorities of the city. The title has been preserved in Wallachia. In Moldavia, since the beginning of the eighteenth century and probably before, the highest position is that of the Hahambasha. After 1750 this position was occupied chiefly by rabbis, though its character and functions were essentially secular. Probably it arose out of the predominance acquired in the course of time by the Starosté of Jassy over his colleagues in the province. This is more likely than that it was created by the central authorities and the prince. The Jews conferred upon the holder of this office the title of Rosh Medina, regent of the country: and as his authority and influence increased, he was recognized as chief also by the Jews of Wallachia. Thus a kind of union was established between the two countries before their actual political union.

The Hahambasha was appointed by a princely decree, which had to be renewed with the accession of each prince. He represented the Jews before the prince and the central authorities, and was freely admitted to their presence, enjoying many privileges and immunities. Each head of a family owed him an annual sum, and a certain sum was due him at betrothals, marriages, and divorces, and from Jewish butchers for each head of cattle slaughtered. He himself and his near kindred were exempt from taxation on the beehives, wine, cattle, and drinks belonging to them, and he owed no corvée, even to the prince. The decree by which he was appointed invariably contained a reference to important services previously rendered by him to the prince.

The Hahambasha had absolute authority in religious questions and very great authority to decide questions in litigation, both civil and criminal. An appeal could be made from his decision only to the Vel-Camarash (the chamberlain of the court) or to the Divan (the supreme court, over which the prince presided), and this solely in questions of importance. In all the larger cities of Moldavia, as well as at Bukharest, he had a direct representative, Vekil-Hahambasha (locum tenens), appointed by a princely decree on his recommendation. This representative collected the fees granted the Hahambasha by the prince.

It was at his recommendation, also, that the prince appointed the Starostés in the communities of the province. There were three in Jassy and one in every other city. The Vekil-Hahambasha and the Starosté were his intermediaries with the authorities of the district, and, like himself, they enjoyed certain privileges and immunities.

Although the rabbis were nominated by the Fruntași (notables) of the Jewish community and all its members, they had to be recognized and appointed by the Hahambasha, who had the absolute right to revoke their appointment.

For a long time in Wallachia there was only one Starosté, at Bukharest, for the whole country. Later there were Staroslés Vekils (locum tenentes), and these were not elevated to the rank of full Starostés before the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The Starosté of Bukharest was in addition Vekil-Hahambasha, under the authority of the Hahambasha, and charged with collecting his fees. At the accession of each prince the decree by which he was appointed had to be renewed. Though the Hahambasha was his superior, he had free play in certain questions. During the reign of Michael Sutz (1818-1821), the Starosté of Bukharest emancipated himself entirely from the domination of the Hahambasha at Jassy, and assumed the title of Hahambasha, at the same time preserving the title of Starosté in his official relations with the authorities.

Though the office of Hahambasha was not hereditary, it remained with some slight interruption in the hands of one family. About 1740 Bezalel ha-Cohen, a distinguished rabbi, brother or nephew of Naphtali ha-Cohen of Prague, known for his disputes with Chajon, became Hahambasha; and after 1750 or 1752 the office was handed on to his descendants, and with some exceptions did not leave them until 1832. In this year the office was abolished in consequence of intrigues and hot contests over the incapacity of the last incumbent, Isaiah ha-Cohen, also called Naftulowich.

In Moldavia, the office of Starosté was abolished at the same time, but only in so far as it involved the functions of chief official of the Jewish corporation in one place. The representatives of the community took the name of Epitropi (administrators). On several occasions the communities were reorganized by the princes Michael Sturdza and Gregory Ghika.

In Wallachia the office of Starosté was officially retained until 1851; but various statutes decreed by the princes subtracted from its importance, and finally the Epitropie (council of the community) was introduced into Wallachia to the exclusion of every other governing agency.

XI

Researches concerning Jewish literature in Roumania have not yet been made. Indeed, doubt may well be entertained whether any such literature worthy of special attention exists. For circumstances were by no means favorable to its production; during the troubled course of Roumanian history the people lived a hand to mouth existence. The epitaphs in the cemetery at Jassy, the only one which has been examined, give evidence of a series of scholars, rabbis, and Dayanim. But the epitaphs prove nothing—the rabbis were generally recruited from Poland or, later, from Russian Poland; even those who were native Roumanians had to resort to the Yeshiboth of Poland, and were lost among the mass of rabbis there; and most of them left their positions to go to other countries or to end their days in Palestine.

Among the rabbis the following two may be mentioned: Jacob ibn Arvani, of Jassy, described as a physician and profound Cabbalist by Joseph del Medigo, who visited Jassy; and Nathan Nata Hanover, rabbi at Fokshani and at Jassy, author of Jawan Mezula, an excellent, trustworthy document on the sufferings of the Jews during the Cossack insurrection.

There can be no question of a Jewish literature in the Roumanian language during the middle ages, in view of the fact that the Roumanian literature itself consisted of little more than inedited chronicles, or religious and popular works, most of which are of quite recent origin.

Jewish authors writing in Hebrew, who were natives of Roumania or lived there from early youth, do not appear until the second quarter of the nineteenth century. These were poets and prose writers, some of whom displayed a fair amount of originality, and handled the Hebrew language with ease and elegance. Such were: Hillel Kahane, M. Pineles, M. S. Rabener, Benjamin Schwarzfeld, D. Wexler, Baron Waldberg, and recently, M. Braunstein-Mebaschan. The rabbis for their part repeated and repeated their superannuated commentaries.

The first Jew who took a place in general Roumanian literature is Dr. Julius Barasch; he created a scientific Roumanian language and popularized the sciences for the Roumanians. The best writers on folklore and on Roumanian philology are Jews, namely: Dr. M. Gaster, Haham of the Sephardic community at London, author of a work on popular Roumanian literature; Aureliu Candrea, author of a work on surnames; M. Schwarzfeld, author of a critical work on popular Roumanian poetry; Lazar Shineanu, author of several works crowned by the Roumanian Academy; and H. Tiktin; the last two recent converts.

Joseph Brociner, lyric poet, is the first Jewish poet who wrote in the Roumanian language; and Ronetti Roman is the most gifted of all Roumanian poets. His poem Radu is epoch-making, and gives him rank among the best poets. Others are Dr. A. Steuermann, poet and prose writer; B.

Giordano (Goldner), a writer of excellent epigrams, unique of their kind; Stephen Cruchanu; Richard Torchanu, and Senea (Frumeshanu alias Schoenfeld).

Among the writers who publish their works in foreign languages are: Dr. M. Gaster; Dr. Solomon Schechter, Reader in Rabbinic at Cambridge and Professor of Hebrew at University College, London; Dr. Marcus Brociner; Dr. Paul Weisengrün; Oswald Neuschatz; Dr. B. Lebel; and Dr. C. Lippe.

The Judeo-Roumanian literature is almost exclusively represented by the Anuarul pentru Israelitzi, a year book for Israelites, mainly literary in character, under the editorship of M. Schwarzfeld; and by the publications of the present writer and his brother, M. Schwarzfeld.

Homiletics is represented by Dr. M. Beck; Talmudic exegesis by Dr. C. Lippe; and Jewish folklore by Dr. M. Gaster. M. Schwarzfeld has published essays in the last-mentioned science, but he is chiefly occupied with biographical studies.

The present writer is the only writer of Roumanian Jewish novels. The object of his tales is to paint the soul and the manners of the Roumanian Jew, and they aim at presenting the persecutions and scenes of the past. S. Janovich publishes sketches of the Roumanian Jew. He is a good Roumanian stylist, but is not sufficiently acquainted with Jewish customs.

The historians of the Jews in Roumania are Moses and William Schwarzfeld (the latter of whom is dead), and chiefly the present writer. Mention must also be made of Jacob Psantir, author of a Judeo-German book, improperly entitled a history of the Jews in Roumania. It is a history of Roumania drawn from second-rate sources, and containing some notes upon the Jews. Its interest resides in the accounts he has gathered from the mouths of old men, and in the publication of certain epitaphs. Joseph Kaufman has published notes on the communities of Piatra, Neamtz, and Roman; the traditions collected by him are the only ones of interest.

Jewish journalism extends back as far as 1856, when the first Judeo-German journal appeared at Jassy. In 1857 the Israelitul-Roman, in Roumanian and French, appeared at Bukharest. Other journals, whose existence was ephemeral, followed; they were written in Judeo-German, in German, in Roumanian and German, in Roumanian, and in Hebrew. Among the journalists the following may be mentioned: Dr. Adolph and Dr. Leopold Stern, brothers, Dr. M. Beck, Julius Schein, A. S. Gold, and San Cerbu. The present writer may claim the honor of having definitely traced the path for Jewish journalism in Roumania by the Fraternitatea, which has served as a model for all Jewish periodical publications. He was aided in the task by his brother Moses Schwarzfeld, who for twelve years has edited the Egalitatea.

Pamphlets in defense of the Jews or in the interest of Roumanian Judaism have been published, chiefly by the present writer.

Some writers voluntarily left Roumania in consequence of the persecutions of the Jews there. Dr. Gaster and the present writer were expelled in October, 1885, in consequence of the law against aliens, which was applied to native Jews.

Following is a list of the articles and studies which have been published on the history of the Jews in Roumania and which partially serve as the basis for the present article:

Dr. E. Schwarzfeld: "The Jews during the Hetaria" (1884); "A Jew on the Throne of Moldavia in 1591" (1884); "The Institutions of the Jews of Moldavia in the Eighteenth Century and during the first part of the Nineteenth Century" (1885); "The Massacre of the Jews under Michael the Brave and Aaron of Moldavia" (1886); "A Chronicle of the Jews in Roumania from 1801 to 1866" (1887); "The Jews of Moldavia under the Code of Kallimachos" (1888); "The Jews under the Organic Law" (1890, 1891), eight studies in the legislation of the time; "Jewish Physicians in the Roumanian Principalities" (1890); "The Jews in the Legislation of Matthew Basarab of Wallachia" (1895); "The Situation of the Jews under Michael Sturdza" (1896); "The Abduction and Baptism of a Child at Jassy in 1843" (1896); "The Jews of Moldavia during the Plague and the Cholera" (1896); "Prince Alexander Sturdza and Dr. Drey" (1896); "The Excesses against the Jews of Galatz between 1840 and 1853" (1898); "The Jews of Bukharest in 1852 to 1853" (1898); "The Tribulations of Rabbi David Halperin of Bukharest" (1898); "A Prohibition forbidding the Jews to inhabit Certain Quarters" (1898); "An Act of Revenge of Isaiah Hahambasha" (1898); "Statistics of the Jews of Bukowina in 1781" (1898).

M. Schwarzfeld: Three communications to the historical society Juliu Barasch in 1887, 1888, 1889; "A Memorial Roll" (Megilla Lezikoron, 1890).

W. Schwarzfeld, "Education among the Jews of Jassy from the beginning of the Nineteenth Century to 1866" (1889); "Jewish Scholars and Writers at Jassy, from the earliest times to the present" (1890); "Epigraphical Researches" (1895), four studies,

THE SITUATION OF THE JEWS IN ROUMANIA SINCE THE TREATY OF BERLIN (1878)

I

The reign of Prince Charles, the present King of Roumania, had an unfortunate beginning. The capital gave him a brilliant reception, but very soon it afforded him the spectacle of a riot against the Jews. An assembly had been convened to confer a constitution upon Roumania. The rough draft submitted by the government stated, in Article 6, that "religion is no obstacle to naturalization." It added, "With regard to the Jews, a special law will regulate their admission to naturalization and thus also to civil rights."

This article was superfluous; the question had been settled in the civil code. But the government wished to draw the attention of the Judæophobes—anti-Semites were not yet known—to this fact so that they might demand its abrogation. The purpose was more than realized. The hangers-on of the government organized bands, and fell upon the Jews on their way to the synagogue recently erected, demolished it, and desecrated the holy precincts (June 30, 1866). The government withdrew Article 6, and put to the vote Article 7, which stated that "aliens of the Christian persuasion alone can obtain naturalization."

From the Roumanian cities the Jews were already banished. Soon they were to be placed beyond the law, too. Called to absolute power, John Bratianu had the archives ransacked in order to bring to light the ancient circulars and decrees promulgated against the Jews in the two principalities. By a series of new circulars he brought them back into force, and the hunting down of the Jews was begun. Jewish inns were shut down; prefects, sub-prefects, and mayors took measures for the wholesale expulsion of the Jews from the villages. Atrocities were committed: with the butt-end of muskets and at the point of the bayonet, men, women, and children were cruelly driven from their homes. In the towns the Jews were brutally seized by the police and the agents of the law, were caught with a lasso, abused, and imprisoned. Some were hunted out of the country, others were condemned by the courts as vagrants. Roumanian subjects though they were, they were forced across the Danube, and, Turkey refusing to receive them, they were drowned in the river.

These barbarities shocked the whole of Europe. Energetic remonstrances were addressed to the Roumanian government, and Bratianu was dismissed.

The conservative ministry succeeding him was no better. Under the mask of tolerance it made the preparations for a legal persecution. This was the very ministry that passed the first restrictive laws on the subjects of the tobacco monopoly and spirituous liquors. Thousands of Jewish families forfeited their livelihood. At the same time riots broke out. Ministers, prefects, all the constituted authorities, made it their duty to harry the Jews. Disgraceful and barbarous scenes were enacted everywhere. The European press denounced these proceedings; the Powers wrote peremptory notes. Nothing came of it. Soon thereafter these same Powers signed commercial agreements with Roumania, a semi-sovereign principality, in which they sacrificed the interests of their own Jewish citizens, impressing Roumanian statesmen with the conviction that civilized Europe itself would not yield the slightest material profit for the sake of the persecuted Jew's cause. Moreover, Bratianu had resumed the leadership, and the man who had allowed himself to be put into confinement as a lunatic in order to escape the consequences of complicity in the attack upon Napoleon III, knew full well how to set about allaying the wrath and the scruples of diplomats. The situation of the Jews was lamentable. It was the eve of the Russo-Turkish war.

II

After the war, in 1878, the European areopagus was convoked for the purpose of recasting the Treaty of San Stefano. The opportunity was seized to regulate the Jewish question in Roumania. The Congress of Berlin proclaimed the equality of all creeds before the law. A man's religion was no longer to constitute an obstacle to the enjoyment of civil and political rights, still less to the pursuit of any of the professions or trades. More than that, all nationalities, owing allegiance to no matter which of the Powers—merchants as well as others—were to be treated, in Roumania, without distinction as to religion, on a footing of perfect equality.

Ignorant of Roumanian affairs and of the knavery and duplicity of Roumanian statesmen, the diplomats of Europe and the Jews of foreign countries openly rejoiced. They soon saw cause to moderate their exultation. Article 44 of the Treaty of Berlin will ever remain a monument to human fatuity, which plumes itself upon legislating according to the abstract formula of the law, without a searching study of men and things. Outsiders might have been astonished at the failure to execute the formal provisions of the Treaty of Berlin; in those who knew the disposition of Roumanian statesmen, it did not awaken surprise. Rather were they taken aback by the wording of the article, which bore in its womb the exceptional laws and the persecutions which Roumania was shortly to display to the civilized world.

Article 41 called forth indignant outcries in the Roumanian press. Fists were clenched, and the Jews of the land were threatened with a general massacre—one bit of knavery the more, by way of preparation for the farce which the Roumanians were going to play before Europe; and as the politicians, of whatever party, were animated by intolerance, they all joined hands behind the scenes to enact it with adroitness and diplomacy.

The government organized diplomatic missions, and, while it was exciting the masses at home, its emissaries, in their negotiations with foreign cabinets, used the artificially fomented dissatisfaction of the people as a pretext to obtain the recognition of Roumanian independence without fulfilling the conditions attached to it in the Treaty of Berlin. Nevertheless they promised, in the name of the Roumanian government, religiously to fulfil the stipulations of the treaty—which did not hinder the government from secretly urging its own supporters and partisans to oppose the government with the utmost bitterness, to yield not a hairbreadth, and to hold high and firm the flag of intolerance and exclusivism.

Thus it came about that Article 7 of the constitution was abrogated after many a throe simulated for the gallery, and thus was born the new article, a model of jesuitism, duplicity, and rascality. The Jews disappeared with a stroke of the pen. Thenceforth Roumania had no Jews, but only aliens not subject to alien protection—pariahs, vagabonds, the targets of any chance passer-by. It was a return to the good old times of outlawry, whose victims might be annoyed, tormented, deprived of life itself, and justice not take cognizance of the wrong.

The limitation of space does not permit me to review the situation of the Roumanian Jews in detail. I can but present to my readers a succinct account, bare of all the finer shades which alone make the picture real and vivid. For, it must be remembered, we are not dealing with a legislation frankly hostile to the Jews, as in Russia, nor with an avowed persecution. For the greater part we are engaged with an adversary who conceals his game, and strikes from behind.

The persecution of the Jews takes on every possible form, it shows itself everywhere. It appears in the restrictive laws; it is incited by the legislative chambers; it emanates from the ministers of the cabinet; it is frankly directed by the bodies corporate of the departments and the communes, by the police, by the administrators of justice, by the army, by the teachers and professors, and by ordinary private individuals. Everybody tracks the Jews, and woe to the Jew who defends himself.

III

And what of naturalization?

According to Article 7 of the constitution in its modified form, naturalization is accorded only by a vote of the two Chambers, and then only to individuals. Naturalization conferred upon a father does not involve the naturalization of his minor children; the Chambers may vote or may refuse it. At one time, if naturalization was voted by one Chamber, the vote stood, even if the other Chamber failed to endorse it.

The rule has since been changed. If one of the Chambers rejects the law of naturalization, the favorable vote of the other Chamber becomes ineffectual, and the whole matter must be gone over again from the beginning. Besides, in contravention to the provisions of the constitution, the Senate accords naturalization only by a two-thirds majority.

Roumania, desiring the recognition of her independence by the European Powers, threw dust into their eyes. To mislead them, the government compiled a list of 883 Jews, participants in the war of 1877, on which the Chambers voted as a whole, and in addition 57 persons, voted upon as individuals, were naturalized in 1880. A shameless traffic had established itself; some of the deputies kept open shop, and naturalization was granted to such Jews as paid down cash, a practice which elicited the remark from Kogalnicanu, that "the Jews had not eaten Roumania, but her representatives had eaten many a Jewish purse."

Thereafter, it was tacitly agreed, no more Jews were to be naturalized. In point of fact, the following figures constitute the tale of Jewish naturalizations since then: 6 Jews naturalized in 1881; 2 in 1882; 2 in 1883; and 18 from 1886 to 1900; in all, 85 Jews in 21 years, 27 of whom have in the meantime died.

The lot of the above-mentioned 883 soldiers deserves to be told. As no one could set forth his own claims, and as the ministry had arranged the list of names on their own responsibility, it is easy to imagine that the choice was determined by caprice. The survivors of the war for independence were, for the most part, passed over; the dead, however, were inscribed. One could be sure that they would not claim the patents of naturalization, for the good reason that they were interred in the soil of Bulgaria. As for the survivors, they were required to bring documentary evidence which they could rarely produce. Moreover, the letters patent were sent to the regiments with strict and confidential orders not to deliver them, and more than half of them were later annulled by the Council of ministers. Such was the end of this farce.

IV

However, the mere withholding of naturalization from the Jews was not enough. It was necessary to render their life so bitter as to disgust them forever with Roumanian citizenship and land. But as barbarous acts and brutality were apt to make too much noise and arouse the attention of the civilized world, recourse was had to the law.

The watchword henceforth was to cut off from the Jew his means of support. Ministers, deputies, senators, and even the press, put their wits to work to propose laws and regulations that would slowly but surely lead to the goal. Under the impulse proceeding from the authorities, the fever took possession even of private individuals. So-called economic societies were formed with the object of embittering the life of the Jews and eliminating them from the country—all summed up in the shibboleth: Nici un ac de la jidani ("Do not buy a pin from the Jews"). There is even a vast anti-Semitic league, with Masonic organization, in a country in which whoever exercises the slightest power is nothing more than an avowed anti-Semite.

Beginning with 1880, restrictive laws are passed. Gradually all the occupations in the hands of the Jews are constituted political rights, which only Roumanians by birth and by naturalization may exercise. From the disclosure of motives made by the court reporters, in the debates in the Chambers, and in the ministerial declarations and circulars, it appears, beyond a doubt, that civil, social, and natural rights are transformed into political privileges only for the purpose of smiting the Jews. If the air is not turned into a monopoly, and bottled for the exclusive use of Roumanians and Christians, it is because Roumanian statesmen, in spite of their ingenuity, have not yet invented the means of doing it.

The laws and regulations promulgated against the Jews are of diverse kinds. In the first place, they aim at commerce and at the middle-men. The Jews were engaged in business at the exchanges; they acted as the middle-men. The law of July 4, 1881, robbed them of this means of gaining a livelihood; to be a money-broker or a commission merchant, it is necessary to be a Roumanian. The Jews are agents or forwarders; the draft of the law of 1882 made this occupation a political right. The law was passed by the Chambers, but as it affected veritable aliens equally with the Jews, the restricting clause was withdrawn. However, it reserves to the government the right to grant the authorization for the pursuit of these occupations, and this authorization is withheld from Jews as much as possible. And in order that the law may not be circumvented, ministerial circulars of 1896 enjoin commission merchants and shippers not to resort to alien mandataries in their business affairs.

Some Jews earned a livelihood by the sale of lottery tickets—the law of January 18, 1883, prohibits lotteries, and from the parliamentary debates it appears clearly that the object of the law was not to put a stop to gambling, not to moralize the people, but to deprive a thousand Jewish families of their living. Moreover, although tombolas and raffles for charitable purposes are permitted, the government usually turns down applications in behalf of Jewish charitable and educational institutions.

To ruin a thousand Jewish families assuredly is a meritorious deed, but there is one still more meritorious—to ruin five thousand families. The liberal government brought this result to pass by the law of March 17, 1884, on “peripatetic commerce.” The Jewish peddler of the towns was completely suppressed by the law, and as for his confrère of the country, practical usage did the same for him.

VI

In order to justify the laws against the middle-men, the argument had been advanced that they competed with the class of stable merchants, though parenthetically it should be said that to a great extent, especially in Moldavia, the regular commerce is in the hands of Jews. The ministry presented a law (1884-85) on the reorganization of the chambers of commerce and trade, which was promulgated March 1, 1886. This law provides that Roumanians by birth or by naturalization alone can serve as electors and are eligible in these chambers; the Jews are excluded from them, because, to quote the court reporter, “a chamber of commerce composed of aliens or Jews cannot well be imagined.”

Imbued with these ideas, the compilers of the code of commerce, recast and promulgated May 10, 1887, decreed that in commandite (limited liability) and joint stock companies, the sole manager or, in case there are a number of managers, at least one more than half the managers, as well as one more than half the auditors and assistants, must be Roumanians. This provision was modified; it was harmful to the interests of the State, and defeated its own purpose. Nevertheless, in the final form, the sole manager, if there is but one, and in other cases one-third of the managers or auditors must be Roumanians, so that Jewish capitalists cannot form limited liability companies for commercial or trade purposes of any kind, even such as have in view educational or benevolent objects. Likewise, they cannot create a commandite company with a Jew as sole manager.

The law of February 16, 1887, in turn dealt with the collection of communal revenues. A ministerial circular of 1886 had forbidden the communal authorities to award to Jews the collecting and receiving of communal revenues; this was disastrous to the finances especially of small communities. Accordingly, the law of 1887 did not attack the Jewish farmer of taxes, it contented itself with ruling out Jewish employees; the employees had to be Roumanians, in the possession of political rights. Many a Jewish family thus lost its means of existence. Very soon there was a return to the terms of the circular of 1886, and the law recast in 1889 forbids Jews to farm the communal revenues.

Now that the Jew in business had been dealt as severe a blow as the interests of the country permitted, the workingman Jew was taken in hand by the law of May 12, 1887, for the encouragement of manufactures. As it was a question of establishing industries in a country with but few, it was not politic to ostracise Jewish manufacturers, and the whole rigor of the persecution fell upon the workingman.

If a manufacturer wishes to profit by the multifarious advantages of the law, two-thirds of his employees must be Roumanians, and only one-third may be aliens, and when new industries are concerned, the aliens are naturally taken from abroad. Similarly, Jews are excluded wholly from employment on the State railways; the law of February 6, 1899, provides that Roumanians alone shall be admissible to positions connected with their management or their works. The law of March 28, 1900, on railways owned by private corporations, likewise forbids the administration to employ more than forty per cent. of alien officials and workingmen, and as these lines are established exclusively on the territory of rural communes, in which Jews are arbitrarily prohibited from living, Jews cannot benefit even by the forty per cent. exception made in favor of aliens, any more than the manufacturer, if his factory is established in a rural district, may include them in the third part of his workingmen permitted by the law to be aliens.

VIII

At the same time with the above, other laws were promulgated, having in view the liberal professions—lawyers, physicians, pharmacists, veterinarians, etc. A spectacle of ferocity was unrolled before the civilized world, ferocity that stopped neither at a Jew sick nor at a Jew in the agony of death.

The law of 1864 had debarred the Jews from entrance into the corporation of lawyers. In order to plead before the tribunals, the courts of appeal and cassation, one must be a member of the bar, a privilege reserved for Roumanians alone. The law of June 8, 1884, in turn deprived the Jews of the right of pleading before justices of the peace, and in 1894, the same right was withdrawn from the Jewish superintendents of estates. The purpose was above all to make Jewish managers undesirable to the proprietors and farmers of estates, by stripping them of the ability to represent their employers before the justices of the peace when business requires it, as it frequently does.

The law on sanitary service of 1885, which was promulgated in its final form on June 14, 1893, is devoted to physicians, veterinarians, pharmacists, whatever relates, intimately or remotely, to public health. No Jew may be employed in the sanitary service in any position whatsoever that depends upon the State, the communes, or any institution which has the least connection with them. At most, the Jew may be engaged as country physician, provided he gives up his place the moment a Roumanian physician claims it. Jews are accepted at hospitals as externs and as interns only in default of Roumanians. In competitive examinations, they are put into the lowest class, no matter if they obtain the best marks. Jewish pharmacists may neither acquire nor manage pharmacies, and pharmacies may employ Jewish apprentices only if they already have one Roumanian apprentice. Jews may not be received as free patients in hospitals, except in case of sickness at once serious and urgent, and as pay patients only so many may be taken in as can be accommodated in ten per cent. of all the beds, provided, of course, that no Christian aliens are applicants for these places reserved for aliens. The same regulation obtains in the private hospitals and in those of the communes, although the Jews contribute to the defrayal of the expenses of the latter. After all the above, it is superfluous to add that the Jews are not admitted to the medical service in the army, and contrary to law, Jewish physicians are forbidden to conduct asylums for the insane.

IX

Beginning with 1893, the persecution assumes a new aspect. To reduce the Jews to misery and famine was not enough; it was necessary to brutalize them. Up to 1860, the mass of the Jews had lived outside of the circle of modern civilization; the Roumanian governments invited them to enter the schools of the State. They accepted the invitation, and the number of Jewish pupils grew quickly; the primary and secondary schools were literally overrun with them. In 1882 they formed a contingent of fifteen per cent. of the whole number of pupils, and in districts in which Jews lived in large numbers, the Jewish contingent was from thirty to seventy-five per cent. In 1891 the Jewish children constituted thirty-nine per cent. of all pupils. In order to exclude them from the schools the law of May 23, 1893, modified by the law of June 6, 1896, was passed. It provides that instruction in the primary grades shall be free for Roumanians only; aliens are to pay a tuition fee, and even so, they are to be received only if there are places available. Now, there are not enough schools, and the exclusion of the Jews follows.

The law of March 23, 1898, in the same way excludes Jews from the secondary and the upper schools, and the law of April 9, 1893, recast March 31, 1899, debars them from all professional and agricultural schools, and admits them only to the schools of commerce and of arts and trades, in which all aliens may at most occupy one-fifth of the total number of places, and that only after the payment of a tuition fee so exorbitant that it is cynicism to speak of the admission of Jews into these schools.

Moreover, when Jews founded schools of their own, obstacles were thrown in their way, and finally, contrary to the law, they were prohibited from teaching on Sundays and Christian feast days, and were forced to keep their schools open on Saturdays and Jewish holidays. The children are forbidden to cover their heads during the lesson in Hebrew.

Besides the laws, there are the interpellations of deputies and senators, and the ministerial circulars and decisions.

The interpellations bear on all sorts of questions, if only they have connection, immediate or remote, with the Jews. Their object is to urge the scrupulous application of the exceptional laws and to instigate the passage of new laws of the same kind. Sometimes the ministers bring about the interpellation through the agency of friends, with the purpose of giving the protection of parliamentary procedure to arbitrary and persecuting measures. Interpellations are made concerning the invasion of the Jews and the exodus of the Jews, concerning births and mortality, concerning failures in business during commercial crises and monopoly, concerning the influence of the Jews and the lawsuits won by them. There is no subject, however trivial, but furnishes material for an interpellation and opportunity to its author to manifest venomous hatred against the Jews.

The object of the ministerial circulars is to remind the authorities and their subordinates of the punctilious and severe execution of the exceptional laws. Often, too, they serve as the occasion for a Draconian interpretation of legal provisions, and they are frequently followed by decisions of the Council of ministers which draw closer the iron circle traced around the Jews, and strike them in places not covered by the provisions of the law.

The law of March 28, 1873, on spirituous drinks, is a striking example. This law forbids the Jews to sell liquors in the villages. A ministerial circular, approved later by a decision of the Council of ministers, interdicted this traffic to the Jews of the small towns and market-towns, under the pretext that they are rural communes, and so was brought about the ruin of two thousand families.

By similar circulars, the tobacco trade was cleared of Jews: gradually the Jewish officials and clerks in the offices under public administration were eliminated, the Jewish workingmen and workingwomen in the public factories were dismissed, and the retail merchants were forbidden to make use of Jewish employees and domestics, although the law of February 3, 1872, provided that only the retailers of tobacco were to be Roumanians. The law of February 28, 1887, sanctioned these arbitrary measures, and fixed penalties for all retail merchants who should take non-Roumanians into their service.

The circulars assume every possible form, and incite the subordinate government officials to all sorts of brutalities. The law of 1869, concerning the rural police, had ordained that vagrants may not establish themselves in rural communes without the authorization of the communal councils. The communal law of 1887 re-enforced this article by decreeing that whatsoever person wishes to establish himself in a rural commune must obtain the authorization of the communal council. Although these regulations did not have in view persons already established in rural communes, the ministers periodically send circulars to the prefects, enjoining upon them the expulsion of the Jews from the country districts. The prefects transmit the circulars to the sub-prefects, and these to the communal councils. The last are not slow to invite the Jews to leave their homes within a stated time, sometimes not more than twenty-four or forty-eight hours. Inhuman, barbarous scenes ensue. The doors of Jewish houses are battered down; men, women, and children are piled on carts, their baggage is flung in after them, or sometimes it is looted, and the unfortunates are forced from their hearths at the point of the bayonet, often enough to rap at the gates of towns and find that entrance is denied them.

XI

The Jews are not driven out from the villages alone. On April 6, 1881, parliament passed the law concerning aliens, which permits the government to expel individuals who trouble the public peace, who endanger the domestic or foreign security of the State, or take part in intrigues with the object of overturning the political or social order at home or abroad. Directed in the first instance against political agitators, this law has been applied to the Jews since 1885; it has become a means of blackmail and fraud in the hands of the politicians and the police agents. A suspicion, a malevolent denunciation, the ill-will of an official, suffices to have a Jew expelled the country within twenty-four hours, by a simple ministerial decision. Journalists, rabbis, merchants, workingmen alike have fallen victims to such proscriptions. Since 1885, the Jews have been living in continual fear of expulsion on the morrow. It is a law of terror and proscription paralleled only in the middle ages.

Basing their action on this law, the ministry, in 1880 and 1881, issued a regulation concerning tickets of free sojourn. The cabinets of the foreign Powers protested, and the regulation fell into desuetude, as applied to Christians. The Jews not having any protectors, the order continued to be enforced in their case. The agents of the police could molest them, deprive them of their personal liberty, persecute them, without let or hindrance. On their arrival at railway stations, or at ports, they are pressed for tickets of free sojourn, for tickets of identity, for passports. As the police does not give such documents to Jews, its agents arrest them, send them from place to place, and lead them about as vagrants. This regulation, connected with the communal law of 1887, serves as the pretext for expelling Jewish proprietors of houses, or those settled in houses owned by Jews, from the market-towns and the small places.

XII

The communal councils in their turn persecute the Jews. In vain for the Chambers to naturalize Jews; the communal councils refuse to carry their names on the electoral lists. In some localities these councils vote taxes imposed on Jews exclusively; in others they deny them the ground for cemeteries. Here they are forbidden to slaughter according to the Jewish rite, and are forced to use the cephalic puncture; there they are deprived of the gabella, the revenue of which is applied to the support of charitable undertakings. Elsewhere the communal councils forbid them to bake bread for sale and to sell meat, or at least meat not ritually slaughtered (kasher). Here and there the little houses of the Jews are demolished, on pretence of a hygienic measure; or the councils take possession of the synagogue, the hospital, or other communal building, and withhold the indemnity under the pretext that the Jewish community is not a legal person. Certain councils prohibit the Jews from taking Christian domestics into their service, or they ordain a distinctive costume for Jewish water-carriers, or a distinctive pail for carrying the water on their shoulders. It need hardly be mentioned that the communal councils exclude poor Jews from all the benefits of public charity, and refuse to exempt Jewish benevolent undertakings from taxation.

XIII

The police not only is vexatious, it is actually fierce. It breaks into the houses of the Jews, is guilty of excesses, abuses its power, commits outrages and rape. It stabs, maims, and slays at will. Prefects, sub-prefects, commissaries, and sub-commissaries, mere agents, vie with one another in brutality and ruffianism. In one town, the police orders the Jews to paint their doors red and not to make purchases at the market until the Christians have done their marketing. In another town, funeral corteges are stopped, the coffins, the holy vessels, and the synagogues are profaned. Elsewhere, the police treats Jewish drivers brutally, throws carbolic acid or sulphur into the synagogues, at once closing the doors and posting sentries outside so that the worshippers cannot escape. It draws up a list of offences, and exacts the payment of penalties. The police agents sometimes torture the Jews to such a degree that the press is forced to institute inquiries, and deputies address interpellations to the ministry. They commit murders gaily, but the crime is hushed up; at most, the police agent is temporarily suspended, or a ridiculous punishment is inflicted. Naturally, it is the police that holds up the Jews at the railway stations. In case of complaint, the answer made by the prefect of police at Bukharest in 1883 is returned: "Liberty, equality, and fraternity are for us Roumanians, not for the Jews."

XIV

Roumanian justice inclines the scales to the side opposed to the Jews. Many an assassin has been acquitted by a jury after pleadings that are a disgrace to civilization. A Jew has been assassinated by a Roumanian? asks the lawyer. What of it? Only one leech the less. Such is the justice of the people.

Whenever possible, the state's attorney fails to prosecute, or prosecutes mildly, those who have committed criminal acts against the Jews, though he lays a heavy hand upon Jews who have made themselves liable to prosecution. The court of assizes does not always do better; its attitude towards Jewish business failures in crises is revolting. It holds out as long as possible against declaring a Roumanian with Jewish creditors insolvent, but a Jew is generally condemned as a bankrupt. However, this is not always the fault of the court. Is it not within our ken that judges were dismissed because they seemed to the minister to have rendered judgments favorable to the Jews, and have not ministers of justice issued circulars demanding statistics on suits at law in order to discover the number of Jews that have won suits in proportion to Christians? Moreover, justice condemns the Jews at random. The oath more judaico flourishes in the most disgraceful form: the bath, the cutting of nails, tapers, blasphemies, all is imposed upon the most respectable Jews, and the rabbis who refuse to countenance these outrageous practices are condemned. And what impudence, what iniquity, when these rabbis appear before the judges! This president cuts off a Jewish witness brusquely, and orders the windows to be opened after he leaves, to dissipate the odor of onions and garlic; another president insults the Jews when they present themselves to regulate certain acts. Judges have been heard to say that they could see their way clear when a Jew and a Christian were arraigned before them, but that they were embarrassed when both suitors were Jews; how were they to proceed to ruin the one as well as the other?

XV

The temple of instruction is not any better than the temple of justice. The school is a galley, which a Jewish child enters with an oppressed heart, and leaves with tears on its cheeks, broken physically and morally. Even before the day of academic laws, pupils and teachers embittered the life of the Jews. The pupils tortured them physically, and the teachers spiritually, by means of vulgar expressions, allusions, direct and indirect, which inflamed the hatred of their Christian companions, and wounded their sensibilities to the quick. Since the passage of the restrictive laws, it is still worse.

Private individuals, encouraged by the example of all invested with the slightest modicum of power, made it their duty to imitate them. It is not astonishing, then, that here, there, and everywhere the silly ritual murder charge starts up, that synagogues are desecrated, that Jews are brutally treated, that pleasure is taken in insulting Jewish funeral corteges. Whenever the occasion presents itself, soldiers and civilians strike the Jews down, emasculate them, beat them unmercifully, and kill them. The director of a paper factory, in Bakau, attained to celebrity by tattooing Jewish drivers. Bands of pillagers and cutthroats are formed, and at times when the police and the government find it necessary to revive their popularity, disgusting scenes are enacted, as at Botoshani, in 1890, or riots are fomented in the populace, as at Bukharest in 1897 and at Jassy in 1898. For several hours there was fighting, merciless blows, pillaging, and devastation, all under the paternal eye of the police authorities and the army, which interfered only to hinder the Jews from defending themselves.

XVI

But the very Jew who is refused the rights of a man and a citizen; who is robbed of the means of living; who is persecuted by everybody; who is without land and without protection; that Jew is considered good enough to serve as food for powder. Consequently the recruiting law applies to him.

Before the Treaty of Berlin the Jews were recruited like Roumanians, aliens were excluded from the military service. After the Treaty, and before the invention of the jesuitical formula, "aliens not subject to alien protection," there was perplexity. The Jews were turned down as recruits between 1878 and 1882. Those who had enlisted were dismissed, and those who presented themselves as recruits were made by main force to put their signature to documents stating that being aliens they did not wish to serve in the army. In December, 1882, the law of military service was changed. An article was inserted providing that the children of aliens born in the country cannot be exempted from the service, unless they affirm that they are under obligations to render military service in another country. By virtue of this cynical remodeling of the law, making it a worthy companion law to Article 7 of the constitution in its jesuitical modification, Jews are accepted as recruits. And a prefect could dare say to a body of Jewish recruits that during the time of service they were soldiers, and Jews after their time was up.

Thus it comes about that thirty thousand Jews, forming part of the army in active service, of the reserves, and of the militia, Jews though they be, bear the cross of Calvary, yet they may not, even under the flag, forget their character as Jews. According to law, they cannot advance beyond the grade of a non-commissioned officer; the other grades are closed to them. The caprice and unlimited power of some of the chiefs prevent them from reaching even these modest honors. Nor is that all: chicanery, brutality, persecution, ruffianism, are practiced upon the Jew in the army as upon the Jew elsewhere. He drags his character as Jew with him like a cannon ball. From the general down to the corporal, everybody maltreats him. Often enough it happens while he is serving his country in the army, that the authorities pitilessly chase his old father, his old mother, his wife, and his children from their homes in the villages or the market-towns.

Military justice is even harsher towards the Jew than civil justice.

XVII.

The impossible situation into which the Roumanian Jews have been put suggested to them the idea of emigration. It is a general scramble for safety, and the economic crisis of 1899 merely accentuated it.

The idea of emigration was for the first time thrown out in 1872. To the atrocities and barbarous persecutions of 1867-1870—brutal expulsions from villages, annoyances of all kinds, and noyades—there were added, in 1871, the riots of Kahul, Vilkow, and Ismail, the end of which was the acquittal of the guilty and the condemnation of the Jews. Benjamin F. Peixotto, consul-general of the United States at Bukharest, in agreement with his friends in America, then requested the Roumanian government to countenance emigration to the United States. The government cynically assented, and had Prince Charles sign a decree according free passports to poor Jews who should leave Roumania. Few persons made use of them; about thirty families found their way across the sea. This was the beginning of Roumanian-Jewish settlements in the United States.

For some years, the emigration movement subsided; here and there a few families left the country at their own expense. After the Treaty of Berlin, however, when the persecuting spirit was gradually embodied in the laws, the aspect of affairs changed. The closing of inns in market-towns (1881) and the continual expulsions from the villages ruined thousands of families. At that time, the Palestinian project agitated the minds of the unfortunates, and was warmly espoused by all of them. Colonization societies were founded, several hundreds of individuals left for Palestine, and founded the first agricultural colony there (1882). Other families betook themselves to the United States. The number of immigrants in that year was approximately 3500 souls.

Since that time emigration is the only refuge. The law on peddling cut off a living from twenty thousand souls, the expulsions from the villages continued, the misery was enormous in 1884. Committees were formed in Roumania to aid those who could no longer support themselves. Some of the impoverished left the country on foot, entreating the help of their coreligionists in comfortable circumstances. Many of them directed their steps towards the United States, others towards the principal cities of Europe, in which they founded important colonies, notably in London and in Paris. The movement revived again in 1886-1887, seven thousand persons emigrating during those two years.

The laws whose enactment followed in rapid succession increased the number of candidates for starvation, and emigration became regular and continuous. There are no official statistics of emigration, but it is safe to estimate the number of emigrants from 1882 to 1894 at 45,000 souls at the lowest.

According to the official statistics of 1876, there were 218,304 Jews in Roumania. The excess of births over deaths from 1876 to 1894 being 70,408, the number of Jews at the end of 1894 ought to have been 288,712. But the census of December, 1894, shows only 243,225 souls, that is, 45,487 less than the number expected. Again, the total of Roumanian immigrants disembarking at New York, from 1882 to 1895, is about 11,700, and these figures are incomplete.

The financial and economic crisis which overtook Roumania in 1899, growing worse in 1900, and which is not yet relieved, but added fuel to the flame. It took the bread out of the mouths of those left unaffected by the exceptional laws and the persecution. The fever of emigration transformed itself into a delirium. All the Jews wanted to leave, leave the hellish country in which life had become intolerable. Groups of tatterdemalions and starvelings, stripped of all means, formed themselves, and left the country afoot, to beg their way to the seaports. Those who were still in possession of a few remnants of their fortune, sold all and emigrated at their own expense. They repaired to Turkey, to France, to England, to Canada, to the United States. At New York alone nearly nine thousand of the unfortunates were disembarked. Thus a living illustration of the misery of the Jews in Roumania was afforded Europe and America; and their coreligionists abroad are in a position to judge of the beneficent consequences of the Treaty of Berlin.

THE ROUMANIAN JEWS IN AMERICA

BY D. M. HERMALIN

I

Previous to the Russo-Turkish war (1877), in which Roumania took an active part, gaining her independence from the Sultan's suzerainty, the Roumanian Jew was not often heard of as an emigrant. Sporadic migration, however, brought Roumanian Jews to every part of the globe, with the exception of America, which, for no particular reason, did not attract their attention. India and Egypt seem to have been more favored than other countries, and Palestine was holy ground, to which rich and pious Roumanian Jews resorted in their old age to die and to be buried in its sacred soil. America was spoken of as a country almost beyond reach, and of its material advantages the average Roumanian Jew knew nothing.

As early as 1840, according to the testimony of a few Roumanian Jewish residents of New York, some Roumanians at Bombay, hearing of fortunes amassed in North America and not finding India to their liking, sailed for New York. Arriving at their destination, they thought themselves the pioneers of Roumanian Jewry on the American Continent, but they were told that others of the same type had been their forerunners.

Diligent inquiry fails to ascertain the exact names, occupations, and dates of the earliest comers. However, it remains an undisputed fact that even the sporadic emigration of Roumanian Jews to the United States did not commence much earlier than 1850.

II

As late as 1870, a Roumanian Jewish immigrant might wander about the country for months without meeting one of his countrymen. But after 1877, the emigration to America began to increase, and almost at once the peculiarities of the immigrants obtruded themselves in American life. These peculiarities were not religious and not national in character, they were chiefly gastronomic—the first impression made by the Roumanian Jew upon the American Jewish community was in the culinary department.

The religious cohesion that manifests itself in the formation of separate congregations was very late in coming. This strange behavior, so unlike the course pursued by other Jewish immigrants, is susceptible of explanation. The early arrivals from Roumania were nearly all unmarried men and rather lax in the matter of religious conformity. Either they were indifferent to religious practices, or if they intermarried with the Jews from other countries, they permitted themselves to be absorbed by the congregations with which the families of their wives had affiliated.

After 1878, when the Jews of Roumania were hard pressed by her government, and were compelled to seek a permanent home elsewhere, they began to take great interest in the letters of their scattered countrymen. Comparing the different reports with one another, they came to the conclusion that America, distant though it was, was best suited for their purpose.

The records show, however, that their migration to America continued to be spasmodic. From 1878 until 1882, the immigration gradually increased from 261 to 1052, forty per cent of the whole number being women and children. In the next year, 1883, there was a decrease of a hundred, and since that time, though on the whole there has been a constant increase, the percentage of increase has varied most irregularly. In fact, if it is desired to know when the Roumanian Jews are more than ordinarily persecuted by their government, it is not necessary to look up the Roumanian edicts against the Jews; we have but to study the annual variation in the number of arrivals in this country. In 1888, for instance, there was an increase of nearly two thousand as compared with the immigration of the previous year, but the next year showed an increase of only four hundred over 1887. This irregular course continued until 1900, when the Roumanian Jewish immigration reached amazing proportions.

III

During all these years, although Roumanian Jews went to nearly every part of the Union and the Dominion of Canada, the city of New York was, as it still remains, the goal of their wanderings. Almost all the Roumanian Jews in America either were residents of New York, or had passed through the metropolis in seeking their fortunes elsewhere. This rule has been broken only since 1900, when well-known European benevolent associations transported a considerable number of the Roumanian wanderers to Canadian shores.

After all, however, the bulk of Roumanian Jewish immigrants still remain in New York, and whatever peculiarities of theirs survived expatriation can be studied nowhere as in the metropolis, in which they have established congregations and societies, and developed individual traits.

As has been said, the earliest Roumanian Jewish immigrants did not attempt to separate themselves from other Jews in religious affairs. But as soon as the more orthodox class began to arrive, and some of them became prosperous in worldly affairs, they thought of indulging in the luxury of a synagogue of their own, and they devoted themselves to the formation of societies somewhat on the model of those they had had in their Roumanian home.

But the creature comforts were provided for earlier than the satisfaction of spiritual cravings. As early as 1884, two Roumanians occupied a basement on Hester Street, where they manufactured grape wine, and served it in Roumanian fashion. Then they installed a complete Roumanian kitchen, whence issued all a Roumanian palate could desire. Others were encouraged to follow suit, and the Roumanian carciuma (wine house) and brutaria (restaurant) became a lucrative business in New York. The first patrons naturally were Roumanians, but soon other Jews flocked to them and paid homage to Roumanian culinary art.

In the same year, 1884, a few youths established the Roumanisch-Amerikanischer Brüderbund, for the purpose, as set forth in their constitution, of devoting themselves to the study of social science. This society can hardly be called an original manifestation of Roumanian needs and character; it rather mimicked similar societies in the neighborhood, organized for pleasure and entertainment.

IV

At the end of 1885, a score of Roumanian Jews assembled in meeting decided to hire a hall on the Bowery for the purpose of holding religious service in the manner they were accustomed to in the old country. They called themselves simply "The First Roumanian American Congregation," without the usual addition of a Hebrew name.

Even at that late date the motives that led them to form a congregation of their own were not of a compelling nature. The Roumanian Jew in America who clings to his religion differs from almost all other immigrants of his calibre. They are eager to have their own rabbis or expounders of the Law, but he is satisfied with the religious authorities existing, so long as they are orthodox. The foundation of the first Roumanian congregation rests on other than purely religious reasons. The Roumanian Jew is wont to pronounce the Hebrew language in a manner peculiar to himself. He differs even from the Galician Jew in this regard, nor does his pronunciation agree with the Hebrew of the South Russian, who is careful at least in the matter of accentuation. A loose and careless way of pronouncing the Hebrew language became somewhat of a fad with the Roumanian Jew, and when he hears prayers recited with precision, he feels repelled. Besides, the Roumanian Jew conducts divine service according to the Sephardic ritual, and as most of the East Side congregations consist of Ashkenazim, it was natural that he should provide for his own religious needs as soon as he could. Again, the Jew in Roumania is accustomed to resort to the synagogue on Saturdays at his leisure, as a place at which to meet and converse with the friends and acquaintances whom he could not see during the week. Once established in America, he longed for the old time synagogue which was his club as well.

The first Roumanian congregation, which met on the Bowery, consisted of about fifteen members, who were not sufficiently blessed with worldly goods to purchase a scroll of the Law; they had to hire one of a Hebrew book-dealer on Canal Street. The congregation rarely met during the week. If one of the members had to recite Kaddish, he either had to gather a Minyan himself, or visit the synagogue of another congregation. But on the Sabbath day the little hall was well filled. If a Roumanian Jew wanted to see any one of his countrymen, he was sure to find him there, or at least meet some one who knew his whereabouts. And in the synagogue foreign and domestic politics were discussed, and above all the fate of those left behind in the "country of Amalek," as the Roumanian Jew in America is fond of calling his native land.

Contrary to expectation, this first Roumanian congregation did not thrive, and had it not been for the great masses pouring in from Roumania, and for the benevolent purpose which it added to its religious objects, it would have decayed entirely. It continued to meet on the Bowery until 1893, when it took a ten years' lease on the building at 70 Hester Street, and established a synagogue at which the full quota of religious services was held. At this moment its membership does not exceed two hundred. On a similar basis, the congregation Kahal Adath Yeshurun, or the Yassier Sheehl, was established in 1897. It also leased a building, 79 Hester Street, for a period of ten years, and its membership runs up to about the same number as the membership of the other.

Recently a third Roumanian Jewish congregation was established in the section of Brooklyn called Williamsburgh, but it is not of more consequence than its predecessors in New York City.

In short, the Roumanian Jew has not been very successful in forming congregations in America. They have not, in fact, even exerted the attraction of a club house upon him; it has been demonstrated lately that he has given up seeking his friends at the synagogue. He now looks them up at the Roumanian coffee-houses, wine-cellar, and restaurants. Such Roumanian Jews as desire to affiliate with a religious body prefer the congregations formed by the South Russians or Bessarabians. They have even learned to overlook "short-comings" in pronunciation and liturgy. And the conditions that prevail in New York characterize Roumanian Jewish communities wherever they exist in the United States; no matter in what numbers Jews from Roumania may have gathered, they are not inclined to form congregations.

VI

As early as the beginning of 1889, there were a number of Roumanian Jews in New York who were very proud of their American citizenship. When they visited their newly-arrived compatriots, they would display the document that entitled them to participation in the political affairs of the United States. The dream of the Roumanian Jew, to be a naturalized citizen, was at last realized. When he was able to grasp the novel situation, he not only prided himself on his citizenship, but looked back with horror and contempt upon his native land, which had robbed him of his rights. Besides the oath sworn before the American Judge, he took another, never to desert the country of his adoption.

It is a fact that in devotion to country, the naturalized

Roumanian Jew in America excels almost every other foreign Jew. The reason probably is that the Roumanian Jew has suffered more through being considered an alien in the country of his birth than any other persecuted Jew of the present day.

The first Roumanian Jewish citizens of New York called a meeting at 104 Orchard Street, and after a short debate concluded to form a political organization. A discussion arose as to the party to which the club was to belong. Not one of the persons present was sufficiently conversant with the principles of the different political organizations to be in a position to advise to which to give their support. Yet they had been told that unless they took sides with the one or the other party, their organization would amount to a mere farce.

At this juncture a youth asked permission to speak. He was a student from a Roumanian University, and had but lately arrived in America to join his parents, who had left him behind to finish his studies. The young speaker delivered a clever address on Abraham Lincoln, dwelling principally upon the efforts made by this President of the United States to establish equality among men, to level the barriers of race, religion, and color. The speaker concluded thus: "And now, my dear countrymen, this noble American, this friend of the enslaved and oppressed, was a member of the Republican party."

He was warmly applauded for his speech, which was delivered in the Roumanian language, and many voices exclaimed in the same tongue: "Traiasca memoria lui Lincoln!" ("Long live the memory of Lincoln!"). Without further deliberation, the association concluded to give its political support to the party that had produced a Lincoln, and so "The Roumanian American Republican Club" was formed. But next year, after the members had had some political experience, the name was changed into "The Roumanian American Independent Citizens Association." Later the association took active part in the political reform movement in New York City. At the end of 1891, contact with professional politicians bred quarrels and disharmony, and the association disbanded. Subsequently it was reorganized as a Democratic club, but the original enthusiasm had evaporated, and it degenerated into an office seekers' society, lying dormant all year, and awakening only when candidates are in the field, and promise rewards in return for votes. In short, the Roumanian club sank to the low degree occupied by the typical political organizations that infest the entire East Side of New York.

VII

A prominent figure in Roumanian-American Jewry worthy of honorable mention is the late Michael Rosenthal, who arrived here early in the "eighties." Though a cobbler by trade, he plunged into business, first as a peddler; then he opened a saloon, and in a few years he had accumulated a little fortune. He was himself almost illiterate, but he loved men of education, and he sought their society and advice. With the aid of such, he established, in 1885, a benevolent and endowment association, called "The American Star." The earliest members of the order were Roumanian Jews exclusively, but later others joined it. It is still flourishing, and it bears the reputation of being one of the best managed benevolent associations in New York City.

In the same year, lodges composed entirely of Roumanian

Jews were formed in connection with the older Orders, and a number of societies sprang up with the double purpose of entertainment and charity. Most of the latter were of short duration. One of the exceptions is the "Carmen Sylva Dramatic Association," which, however, is now about to share the fate of the majority. This association was formed in honor of the Roumanian queen, whose nom de plume is Carmen Sylva, and who bears, among Roumanian Jews, the reputation of being a liberal woman. It was composed of young men and women, and one of its purposes was the cultivation of Roumanian language and dramatic literature. Several dramatic performances were given during the winter season, which were well patronized by the countrymen of the young actors. But as the persecutions of the Jews increased in Roumania, hatred of Roumanian language and literature grew with them in America, and the performances lost their patrons and the society its prestige.

VIII

It is proper to devote some space to the Roumanian Jewish actors, who began to arrive in New York as early as 1881. They played in a concert hall, on the Bowery, at that time known as the "Oriental Theatre." At the end of 1886, the best Jewish company of actors and actresses came to New York, and took up their headquarters at another concert hall, renamed in their honor, "The Roumania Opera House." The company soon attracted the attention of the entire Jewish population of New York; nevertheless the income was not sufficient to support the members of the troupe, and they suffered many hardships.

This company of actors was fully equipped with plays, wardrobe, scenery, and even playwrights from Roumania. The authors composed all manner of plays, but the undertaking languished until 1894-95, when skill began to command its due price. At present, the three greatest theatres on the Bowery, the People's, the Thalia, and the Windsor, are Jewish, and some actors have actually become rich; all others are making a decent living. One manager, as poor as a church mouse on his arrival in America, and at first dependent upon what his wife could earn as a soubrette, has amassed a fortune of two hundred thousand dollars. His wife only recently retired from the stage.

In fact, it may be said that the Yiddish press and literature, though not founded by Roumanian Jews, owe their present material and literary success greatly to Roumanian Jewish influence.

IX

A movement which attracted great attention throughout the country was started in 1890 by a Roumanian Jew named Jacob Ochs. His movement purposed to introduce a new Masonic Rite in this country designed to oppose the old York Rite in vogue in England and in the United States. This Jacob Ochs had been initiated into the mysteries of freemasonry while yet in Roumania, a circumstance which goes to show that he was possessed of exceptional intelligence and attainments, for in Roumania Jews are rarely accepted into the Masonic fraternity. When he arrived in New York, he was recognized as a lawful Mason in good standing by the York Rite lodges. But according to his notions, the American Masons did not perform their duties as such, and he protested against their course. He was drawn into an altercation with the grand officers, and he reported their actions to several European grand lodges, at the same time asking permission to organize new lodges under a European Rite, in order to show Americans what real Masonry is.

Strangely enough, of all the European grand lodges only the Spanish Rite of Madrid seized the opportunity, and invested Mr. Ochs with full authority as its representative in the United States. The first Masonic lodge formed under Spanish jurisdiction consisted only of Roumanian Jewish immigrants, but later Mr. Ochs invaded American territory and organized Masonic lodges among native Americans. His influence spread rapidly, and lodges were organized in New York by Jews, Italians, Spaniards, Frenchmen, Germans, and Americans. After the field had been so well covered in New York, he went to Brooklyn, and then to Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and other large towns, everywhere meeting with great success.

After four years of unceasing labor, he was arrested on the charge of fraud; he was accused of having collected initiation fees for a society, without authorization. The American press of New York and its vicinity, influenced by York Rite Masons, was very bitter against him. But the trial never came off; his credentials showed that he had acted honorably and lawfully, and the case was dismissed on motion of the District Attorney. In the meantime the lodges he had formed fell into a state of neglect and disorganization. However, some of them, consisting of Roumanian Jews, who knew the integrity of Mr. Ochs, weathered the storm, were reorganized, and became most efficient agents of charity and benevolence. Recently, they set themselves free from Spanish sovereignty, and with much difficulty they established "The Grand Orient of North America of Free and Accepted Masons," and the order is recognized by almost all European grand lodges.

The occupations of the Roumanian Jews in the United States do not differ materially from the occupations of others, with the exception of their wine-cellars, coffee-houses, and restaurants. On the whole, it should be said, the Roumanian Jewish spirit is inclined towards commerce, although thirty-five per cent. of the immigrants are artisans, chiefly tailors and carpenters. When they arrive in America, they speedily find work at their trades; they work hard, and accumulate as much as possible, and after a few years of industrious labor they nearly all start some business. If they succeed, they continue to strive; if they fail, they return to their original calling. Among the others, who have been engaged in commerce all their life, there is rarely one to be found who applies himself to the learning of a trade on his arrival in this country, a practice so common with other immigrant Jews. As a rule, they become peddlers, dealing in all kinds of merchandise, chiefly notions, dry goods, and jewelry. In this capacity they journey, not only through the State of New York, but almost all over the country, and then settle down to a permanent occupation, either in New York City or at some other favorable spot. Among them are successful merchants, with establishments, not only on Grand and Canal Streets in New York, but also on Maiden Lane and Broadway. They are engaged in the wholesale diamond and woolen trades, and some in the banking business on Wall Street.

Roumanian Jews follow similar occupations in the larger towns of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. In other localities they have not yet succeeded to such a degree as to attract attention, unless an exception be made in favor of some noteworthy business establishments in a few Southern towns.

After the recent war with Spain, a considerable number of Roumanian Jews went to Cuba and Puerto Rico, and report has it that their business is thriving on both islands. Some five months ago a party of six young Roumanians left New York for the Hawaiian Islands. Nothing definite is yet known about them.

Roumanian Jewish young men who came here with their parents, after having striven in vain while in Roumania to attain to one of the learned professions, take up special studies immediately upon their arrival, and qualify themselves as physicians, lawyers, dentists, and engineers. Above ten per cent. of East Side lawyers and physicians in New York are Roumanians. It is said that the Philadelphia Dental College is always attended by a fair percentage of Roumanian students. Dentistry seems to be a favorite profession with them, and the famous Philadelphia institution attracts them. Not a few of the dentists have returned to European countries after graduation, and are practicing their profession there with considerable success.

XI

The Roumanian café as well as the Roumanian wine-cellar and restaurant is being conducted in New York more or less in the same way as in Roumania. The Roumanian Jews gather at these public houses for many purposes besides eating and drinking. They serve as meeting places for friends, where they discuss business and social matters, and where, above all, in Oriental fashion, over a cup of black coffee and through the blue smoke curling up from their cigarettes, they indulge in a game of cards or chess. The café is a perfectly innocent resort, and it is the only place at which the Roumanian Jew finds enjoyment. Latterly the custom has grown up of having Roumanian music in the public houses, and another touch is thus added to the homelike surroundings, arousing sweet memories in the frequenters.

The owners of the cafés and similar places are doing a thriving business in the East Side of New York, some have even accumulated fortunes. By a moderate estimate there are in New York one hundred and fifty restaurants, two hundred wine-cellar, with lunch rooms attached, and about thirty coffee-houses kept by Roumanian Jews. During the last three years the Roumanian resorts have been frequented by all classes of Jews and lately by not a few non-Jews.

With the growth of the Roumanian Jewish population, the wealth of the earlier immigrants has increased. The situation of their brethren in Roumania appealed to their generosity, and two years ago, under the leadership of the active and talented Dr. P. A. Sigelstein, one of the prominent physicians of New York, the admirable "Roumanian Hebrew Aid Association" was formed. The association was called into existence in 1898 by a few Roumanian Jews, for the express purpose of ameliorating the condition of the poor immigrants arriving from Roumania. It has quickly grown into a powerful charitable institution, and when the great influx of Roumanian refugees came in 1899 and 1900, it was able to extend a helping hand to the unfortunates. It has attracted the attention of many charitably inclined Jews, and large sums have been entrusted to it for distribution among its wards. According to the last report of the association, $1201.76 was expended from dues collected from members. But the whole sum disbursed was approximately $30,000.

In 1900, the association sent 1362 persons to almost all the States of the Union; 402 of them were married, and twenty-two persons, who had become invalided through their hard journey and exposure, were furnished with means of transportation to return to their native cities in Roumania. During the same year, 269 applications for relief from Roumanian Jewish residents in New York were received; twenty-four were denied, and the remainder cost the association $330. Of the new arrivals, nearly two thousand were started as peddlers, and for about the same number of artisans work was procured. The association has already made a good record for itself, and it is continually preparing for the new emergencies to be expected.¹

By a moderate estimate, there are nearly forty thousand Roumanian Jews on American soil, twenty-four thousand of whom are living in Greater New York. On the whole, they are an industrious class of people, and grasp at every opportunity to Americanize themselves. They have a proper appreciation of American institutions, and learn to speak and read the English language in a shorter time than other foreigners. They regard the United States as their permanent home, and do everything within the bounds of possibility to qualify themselves to be worthy citizens of the great Republic that has offered them a secure haven of rest.

A PROPOSED AMERICAN JEWISH HISTORICAL EXHIBITION

Several years ago Judge Mayer Sulzberger, of Philadelphia, suggested the holding of an exhibition of objects relating to American Jewish history. Shortly after this suggestion had been made, the Anglo-Jewish Exhibition was held in London, in 1887, and the latter was carried out on so elaborate a scale that the American project was soon abandoned, mainly because it was believed at the time that there was not sufficient material in this country for such a purpose.

Since 1887, however, owing largely to the work of the American Jewish Historical Society, so much material has been discovered that the plan of holding an exhibition was naturally revived, and it has long been felt that though the society referred to has published a great deal in a descriptive way, yet the actual seeing of historic objects, or even the very fact that an exhibition is being held of objects dealing with the history of the Jew in this country, is something impressive in itself. In other words, an American Jewish Historical Exhibition is bound to attract far more wide-spread attention than a dozen learned volumes can ever bring about, and it is such an exhibition that it has now been definitely decided to hold in New York City, probably during the winter of 1902.

ORIGIN OF THE PLAN

At the annual meeting of the American Jewish Historical Society, held at Philadelphia, in December, 1900, Dr. Cyrus Adler, in the course of an elaborate address, called attention to the good results which might be expected to follow an exhibition of objects relating to the history of the Jewish race in America, results beneficial not only to the society by bringing out new material, but to the Jewish community as well.

At the same meeting, Mr. Joseph Jacobs, of London, presented an interesting paper entitled "A Plea for an American Jewish Historical Exhibition," in which many well-considered arguments were advanced for holding such an exhibition in this country. It would further the ends of historical research, and the study of American Jewish history would undoubtedly be stimulated by the sight of so many historical objects illustrating the part played by the race on the Western Continent. A mass of new material would be brought out, for, as was suggested, while many of the old families might be very reluctant about allowing individual students to examine objects of family history, this reluctance would at once vanish when the same objects were desired for a general exhibition such as the paper outlined.

"An exhibition," said Mr. Jacobs, "affords an occasion for the systematic collection of historic portraits and other historic relics, which the transactions of a society can seldom offer. . . . It can appeal more directly, too, to all institutions having connection with the history and archæology of the country."

Still another feature of the proposed exhibition must appeal even more readily to the Jewish community at large, and that is, that it will show that the Jew is not a newcomer to American soil. The objects exhibited must impress the fact, far more than many learned volumes can, that the Jew has been identified with American history from its very beginning, that he played his part, and most worthily, too, in colonial times, in the days of the Revolution, and later on during all periods of trial and transition.

Aside from being instructive to the non-Jewish public, however, the exhibition must prove no less instructive to the Jews themselves. "It would cause as much surprise to Jews as to others to find how closely they have been connected with American history from its very beginning."

Those who had the pleasure of listening to these addresses were much impressed, and at the conclusion of the meeting they were referred to a special committee which was to report to the Executive Council of the Historical Society as to the advisability of holding such a proposed exhibition. This special committee consisted of the following gentlemen: Hon. Oscar S. Straus, Judge Mayer Sulzberger, Mr. Max J. Kohler, Dr. Cyrus Adler, Dr. Herbert Friedenwald, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, Mr. Joseph Jacobs, Mr. Arnold W. Brunner, Rev. Dr. William Rosenau, Rev. Dr. G. Gottheil, Hon. N. Taylor Phillips, William J. Salomon, Esq., Leon Hühner, Esq., Mr. Mendes Cohen, Julius Rosenthal, Esq., Rev. Dr. Philipson, and Mr. Clarence I. De Sola, who, after several months' deliberation, reported that they were "convinced that the historical material was in a way far more varied and interesting than could at first be anticipated."

The conclusions of the committee were embodied in the following statement: "The committee are strongly of the opinion that an exhibition such as has been sketched out would do credit to the Jewish name in America, and convince the American people that its Jewish section has played a worthy part in its annals from the very beginning, and is an integral part of it, would greatly stimulate and advance the study of American Jewish history, and above all, would awaken interest in Jewish matters, not alone in the outside world, but among Jews at large themselves." New York was recommended as the place for holding the exhibition.

Following the adoption of this report and of a resolution by the Council to hold the exhibition, an executive committee of fifteen was appointed, with power to appoint subcommittees from among members of the society and other cooperating organizations.

WHAT WILL BE EXHIBITED

The intention is to exhibit "historical records illustrating the history of Jews in America, including such objects as Columbus' earliest accounts of his discovery, written in the form of letters to secret Jews of Spain; Inquisition records; Washington's letters to Jews; portraits, miniatures, and prints of American Jewish celebrities; historical relics, photographs, charts, and prints of Jewish synagogues and institutions; histories of institutions, manuscripts, autographs, works by American Jewish artists, etc." As it is also proposed to collect and publish a bibliography of Jewish Americana, there will be included collections of all books and pamphlets written by Jews in America, or pertaining to American Judaism. An exhibition of objects of Ecclesiastical Art and of Jewish Antiquities, not confined to the United States, is also under consideration.

COOPERATION OF ALL NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

It has already been stated that it has been decided to hold the exhibition during the winter of 1902. It was felt, however, that such an exhibition should not be narrow in any sense, nor should it for the same reason be held by the American Jewish Historical Society exclusively. To do credit to American Judaism it must not be limited to objects that are curious or ancient merely, but it should in the full sense of the term be a general and a national exhibition.

While of course relics and records of colonial and revolutionary times will form a most interesting part of the project, it was felt, nevertheless, that the great influence of the German immigration of 1848 and that of the later Russian influx of 1880 are factors of prime importance in American Jewish history and must be properly represented; nor should the mighty influences of our great national organizations be ignored.

For the reasons stated, the exhibition will be given by a distinct body, and merely under the auspices of the American Jewish Historical Society. The cooperation of all national organizations is therefore not only desirable but essential. The Jewish Publication Society, the Baron de Hirsch Fund, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Orthodox Jewish Congregational Union, the Hebrew Union College, the Jewish Theological Seminary, the B'nai B'rith, the Free Sons of Israel, the Sons of Benjamin, the Order Brith Abraham, the Keshet Shel Barzel, the Jewish Chautauqua Society, the Hebrew Sabbath School Union, the National Farm School, the Council of Jewish Women, the National Conference of Jewish Charities, and the Federation of American Zionists are among the organizations which have been invited to participate. It is the desire of the Executive Committee that such organizations nominate committees of their own, so that in this way the General Committee for the exhibition may be formed. By this means all phases of Jewish thought and activity in this country will be properly represented.

The Executive Committee has already entered upon its work, and the various committees on site, on publicity, on bibliography, etc., have already been organized.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The Secretaries or other officers of the National Organizations, including five branches of the Alliance Israélite Universelle, were requested to compile an account of the work done by their respective associations during 1900-1901 (5661), for publication in the present issue of the Year Book. The accounts compiled from the newspaper clippings and reports sent by some, in response to the request, are marked with an asterisk (*), and a dagger (†) indicates those taken from any available source in the absence of an official response.

ALLIANCE ISRAËLITE UNIVERSELLE

BALTIMORE BRANCH

The annual meeting was held March 3, 1901. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. A. Friedenwald; Vice-President, Rev. Dr. B. Szold; Treasurer, Dr. A. B. Arnold; Secretary, B. H. Hartogensis, 204 Courtland. Directors: Wm. Rosenau, A. Guttmacher, S. Schaffer, C. A. Rubinstein, A. Kaiser, Dr. Jos. Blum, Dr. Harry Friedenwald, Isaac Davidson, H. W. Schneeberger, Jacob Herman, Leon Schiff, Benj. Cohen, Louis Kaufman, Silas M. Fleischer, F. Fuechsl, M. S. Levy, J. Rothholz, Simon Dalsheimer. The Secretary's report shows a membership of 115. The sum of $400 was sent to the central society at Paris. At the instigation of the president of the local branch, the sum of $700 was collected for the Bessarabian sufferers in the Jewish community at large, and at his suggestion a further sum of $700 was collected in the Russian Jewish community for the same purpose.

†NEW YORK BRANCH

The New York Branch of the Alliance Israélite Universelle was reorganized at a meeting held in Temple Emanuel, April 23, 1901, at the instigation of M. Nissim Béhar, at present in the United States as the representative of the central organization of the Alliance, at Paris. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, and addressed by Hon. A. S. Solomons, Mr. Louis Marshall, Bishop Henry C. Potter, the Rev. Samuel Schulman, in English, by the Rev. Hirsch Maslianski, in Hebrew and Yiddish, and by the Rev. A. M. Radin, in German. M. Béhar read an account of the work of the Alliance and explained the stereopticon views of Palestine thrown upon a screen.

At a subsequent meeting the reorganization was completed; Mr. Louis Marshall was elected President, and the Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA BRANCH

The sum of 2484.10 francs was sent to the treasurer in Paris.

No annual meeting has been held since 1898.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH HISTORICAL SOCIETY *

The ninth annual meeting was held in Philadelphia, at Witherspoon Hall, on December 26, 1900, ninety persons being in attendance. The Treasurer reported the total receipts to be $2584.05, and the expenditures $1363.88, leaving a balance of $1220.17. The Corresponding Secretary reported a membership of 227. Publications No. 8 was issued during the year. The following new by-law was adopted: "Any member who shall have neglected or omitted to pay his annual dues for three successive years shall, on notice to him from the Treasurer of that fact and of this by-law, ipso facto cease to be a member of the Society; unless within one month after said notice he pays all of his dues in arrear, or shall be excused therefrom by the Executive Council of the Society, which is hereby authorized, on proper grounds, to remit said dues."

The following officers were elected: President, Dr. Cyrus Adler; Vice-Presidents, Hon. Simon W. Rosendale, Mendes Cohen, Esq., Rev. Dr. B. Felsenthal, Prof. Charles Gross; Corresponding Secretary, Dr. Herbert Friedenwald; Recording Secretary, Max J. Kohler, Esq.; Treasurer, Prof. Richard Gottheil. Additional members of the Executive Council: Hon. Mayer Sulzberger, Prof. Morris Jastrow, Jr., Hon. N. Taylor Phillips, Hon. Simon Wolf, Prof. J. H. Hollander, John Samuel, Esq., Rev. Dr. David Philipson, Rev. Henry Cohen, and Prof. Morris Loeb.

The following papers were presented and read:

1. "The Early Jewish Settlement at Lancaster, Pennsylvania," by H. Necarsulmer, Esq., New York.
2. "Notes on the History of the Earliest Existing German Jewish Congregation in America" (Rodeph Shalom of Philadelphia), by Rev. Dr. Henry Berkowitz, Philadelphia.
3. "Fray Joseph Diaz Pimienta, alias Abraham Pimienta, of the Island of Cuba, and the Inquisition in Seville, 1720," by Prof. Richard Gottheil, New York.

4. "An Incident connected with Dr. David Nassy, Surinam, 1797," by Prof. Richard Gottheil.

5. "Notes on the Grant of Original Privileges to the Jews of Surinam by the Local English Governor and Council" (1665), by Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes, New York.

6. "Aaron de Montezinos and the Theory that the American Indians are Descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes," by Max J. Kohler, New York.

7. "History of the Jews in Georgia in Colonial Times," by Leon Hühner, Esq., New York.

8. "The History of the First Russian-American Congregation," by J. D. Eisenstein, Esq., New York.

9. "The Jews of Barbados," by Dr. Herbert Friedenwald, Philadelphia.

10. "Notes on the History of the Jews in Jamaica," by Max J. Kohler, New York.

Mr. Joseph Jacobs presented a plea for a Jewish historical exhibition, and a special committee was appointed to consider the question (see pp. 104-108).

CENTRAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN RABBIS †

The twelfth annual meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis was held in Philadelphia, July 2 to 6, 1901. Reports were presented by the President, the Treasurer, the Corresponding Secretary, the Committees on the Union Hymnal, on Rabbinical Qualification and Membership, and on the Non-affiliated with Congregations, and by the Advisory Committee and the Publication Committee, the last on the Union Prayer Book. The committees on the Quarterly Review and on the Summer School did not report.

In the course of the meetings, papers were read by the following: Dr. Talcott Williams, on "The World's Debt to Judaism"; Dr. Cyrus Adler, on "American Jewish History"; Rev. Dr. S. Sonneschein, on "Judaism of the Nineteenth Century," in the discussion of which the assertion was made that the organization was an association of reform tendencies; and by Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, on "The Jew in the Nineteenth Century." Rabbi Max C. Currick delivered a eulogy on the late Rabbi Oscar J. Cohen. The address of welcome was made by Rev. Dr. Jos. Krauskopf.

There were discussions on the part of the President's report relating to Zionism; on the report of the Committee on the Non-affiliated with Congregations; and on the report of the Committee on the place of Jesus in the curriculum of Jewish Religious Schools; the position of Judaism in respect to the founder of Christianity was declared to be negative.

The following resolutions were adopted: The work of the Alliance Israélite Universelle, the Jewish Chautauqua, the Jewish Publication Society, the proposed American Jewish Historical Exhibition, and the National Farm School was endorsed; on the death of F. Max Müller and John Fiske; on the anniversary of the death of Zacharias Frankel; and on the seventieth birthday anniversary of Adolf Neubauer.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Honorary President, Moses Mielziner; President, Joseph Silverman; Vice-Presidents, Joseph Krauskopf and Samuel Sale; Recording Secretary, A. Guttmacher; Corresponding Secretary, Maurice H. Harris; Treasurer, Charles S. Levi. Executive Committee: David Philipson, Joseph Stolz, Stephen S. Wise, Tobias Schanfarber, L. Grossmann. Committee on Rabbinical Diploma: Moses Mielziner, Gotthard Deutsch, David Philipson, Louis Grossmann, and Max Margolis. Arbitration Committee: Emil G. Hirsch, Gustave Gottheil, and Kaufman Kohler. Trustees of Ministers' Fund: Henry Berkowitz, Israel Aaron, and Edward N. Calisch.

The next annual session will be held at New Orleans, in November, 1902.

THE COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

In pursuance of the amendment to the constitution, adopted at the Second Triennial in Cleveland, in March, 1900, the Council of Jewish Women held its first executive session in New Orleans, La., February 17 to 23, 1901.

In addition to ten members of the Executive Board and the President of the New Orleans Section, who was invited to attend all sessions, there were 32 delegates from 21 Sections, making a total of 29 entitled to vote at the general sessions.

Four meetings of the Executive Board were held and five general sessions.

The President reported the following appointments: Vice-Presidents for States: Alabama, Mrs. Lee Marx; California, Mrs. Max Sloss; Colorado, Mrs. Alfred Muller; District of Columbia, Mrs. Louis Stern; Georgia, Mrs. J. Hirsch; Illinois, Mrs. Chas. Stettauer; Indiana, Mrs. Philip W. Frey; Iowa, Mrs. Cecile R. Hirsch; Kentucky, Mrs. Ben Strauss; Louisiana, Mrs. J. Gutheim; Maryland, Mrs. S. L. Frank; Massachusetts, Mrs. Jacob Hecht; Minnesota, Mrs. Leopold Metzger; Mississippi, Mrs. Henry Frank; New York, Mrs. Isabella R. Wallach; Ohio, Mrs. M. B. Schwab; Pennsylvania, Mrs. Lowentritt; Texas, Miss Jeannette Goldberg; Utah, Mrs. Ida M. Bamberger; Washington, Mrs. Bailey Gatzert.

She reported further: An additional life member, Mrs. Bertha

Rayner Frank, of Baltimore; the formation of sections in Oakland, Sacramento, and San Francisco, Cal.; Dallas, Waco, Marshall and Corsicana, Texas; Sioux City, Ia.; Dayton, O.; and Seattle, Washington, an increase of 10 sections since the Triennial.¹

$644.21 were contributed to the Famine Funds for Bessarabia and India.

The President attended the executive session of the Council of Women of the United States, held in Indianapolis, in October, 1900.

The chief business was the consideration of details for the carrying out of the recommendation of the Secretary and the amendment to the constitution adopted at the Cleveland Triennial of March, 1900, to organize Junior Sections.

A constitution for Junior Sections was adopted on the lines of that for Senior Sections, providing, however, for membership of boys as well as girls between the ages of 15 and 21; making the due $1, one-third of which is to be paid into the general treasury, and defining the objects to be "The study of Judaism, Jewish literature and history, philanthropy, and social questions."

Miss Jeannette Goldberg, Chairman of the Committee on Junior Sections, was instructed to send out the constitutions and simple suggestions for study. She reported six Junior Sections organized and waiting for the official constitution.

Several hundred dollars were reported contributed to the National Hospital for Consumptives in Denver, and a resolution was passed instructing the Chairman on Philanthropy to urge the contribution of 25 cents annually by every member.

Active co-operation with the National Consumers' League was reported, and that the machinery of the Council had been of great assistance in the relief of the Galveston flood sufferers and the immigrants from Roumania.

A report of progress was read from the Jewish Study Society of London, most appreciatively acknowledging the Council of Jewish Women as the author of its being and offering terms of closer affiliation, which were heartily accepted; viz., a free interchange of all printed matter, cost of carriage to be paid by the receiver; and a delegate to be sent by each society to the triennial convention of the other.

The proceedings of the Second Triennial were ordered printed, the expense to be met by a per capita tax on all Sections.

¹As a result of the New Orleans meeting, Sections have been formed in Brookhaven and Woodville, Miss.; Palestine and Beaumont, Texas; Hot Springs, Arkansas; and Nashville, Tenn., making a total in June, 1901, of 63 Sections with a membership of about 7000, an increase of over 2000 since March, 1900.

As the next Triennial would come in the fall of 1902, only 18 months from the executive meeting, it was voted to omit the next executive session and hold the Third Triennial between October 15 and December 1, 1902; place to be determined later.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

On Religious School Work.—Increase in number of women placed on school boards; successful work for raising the age of confirmation and securing simplicity in connection therewith; increase in number and success of mission schools.

On Religion.—A great and steady increase in more serious study of Jewish subjects. The chairman urged that there be more individual work in the Circles and less dependence on professional leaders, and the formation of Sections in small places where there is no congregation.

On Philanthropy.—Increased interest in preventive and social work, and careful study of philanthropy by a number of Sections. The systematic work of the San Francisco Section is especially commended.

The Corresponding Secretary reported an increase in membership of about 1800 since March, 1900. She urged, as the two most vital things before the Council, "the development of the Junior Sections" along right lines, i. e., with due regard to the ferment and questioning of the adolescent period, and "the study of the development of Judaism."

She also recommended that at least one evening during the season be given over to the consideration of the history and influence of the Jews in the locality in which the Section is situated, and that the local history of the Jews be studied by both Senior and Junior Sections.

FEDERATION OF AMERICAN ZIONISTS *

The Fourth Annual Convention took place June 16 to 17, 1901, in Philadelphia, Pa. The total income for the year was reported to have been $3465.24; the expenditures, $3095.49; Shekel dues were paid by 3800 persons. Action was taken upon the following points: $50 was voted to the Abarbanel Library at Jerusalem; Shekels are to be accepted from non-members; Zionist societies are to be organized as share societies of the Jewish Colonial Trust; the Order Knights of Zion, of Chicago, is to be recognized as a sub-federation, to include Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Kentucky; and a Zionist periodical is to be established. For the last purpose, $500 of the funds of the Federation are to be set aside annually, and each of the federated societies is to be assessed $5, in return for which it is to receive five copies of the periodical, which is to be issued under the direction of the Executive Council. Other recommendations and resolutions related to the study of Hebrew; the support of Hebrew schools by Zionist societies, or their establishment in towns where none exists; the use of Palestinian products; the formation of sub-federations in cities where four or more societies exist; and the status of the Colonial Bank. A mass-meeting was held on the evening of June 16, at which addresses were delivered in English, Hebrew, and Yiddish.

The following officers were elected: President, Richard Gottheil; Honorary Secretary, I. D. Morrison; Treasurer, William Morris, of Philadelphia; Vice-Presidents: Lewis N. Dembitz, Dr. Marcus Jastrow, Dr. Gustave Gottheil, Rev. M. S. Margolis, Rev. H. Maslianski, Rev. Isidore Myers, Rev. A. J. Silver, Rev. Joseph Seff, K. H. Sarasohn, and Jacob Saphirstein. Representatives on the Vienna Actions Comite: the President, Rev. Dr. S. Schaffer, Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes, Leon Zolotkoff, and Rev. Dr. S. S. Wise. Executive Committee: Dr. B. L. Gordon, Moses Klein, Abram Radin, Miss Henrietta Szold, Gabriel H. Mayer, M. Lande, Dr. S. Mosessohn, S. D. Solomon, D. Orently, S. Abel, M. Rosenbaum, and Dr. J. L. Bluestone.

HEBREW SABBATH-SCHOOL UNION OF AMERICA

The biennial session of the Hebrew Sabbath-School Union was held on January 14 and 15, 1901, at Cincinnati. About one hundred delegates were present. The President, Dr. David Philipson, read an address on Religious School Problems. Rabbi Frederick Cohn, of Fort Wayne, Ind., presented a paper on "The Scope of the Jewish Sabbath School." In accordance with a suggestion of the President, it was resolved to appoint one or more workers whose task it shall be to visit small communities where no religious schools exist and organize such. The Union has published during the past year a third series of leaflets in Biblical history comprising the period from Joshua to the accession of Saul.

Executive Officers: President, Dr. David Philipson; Vice-President, Dr. M. Mielziner; Secretary, Rabbi Charles S. Levi; Treasurer, William Goodheart.

INDEPENDENT ORDER AHAWAS ISRAEL *

The eleventh annual convention was held March 3, 1901, at Progress Hall, in New York City. It was reported that during the year 35 new lodges had been installed, and three lodges had been suspended, leaving the Order composed of 118 lodges, 63 in the State of New York, 1 in Connecticut, 5 in New Jersey, 25 in Pennsylvania, 18 in Massachusetts, and 6 in Maryland, with a membership of 6374, an increase of 1756 over the previous year. The receipts of the Endowment Fund were $35,247.65, of the General Fund, $6024.48, and of the Reserve Fund, $1786.60. The disbursements from the Endowment Fund, on account of 65 deaths, were $32,912.86, and from the General Fund, $7454.24.

INDEPENDENT ORDER B'NAI B'RITH

STATE OF THE ORDER

The membership of the Order has greatly increased, both here and in Europe. Though some districts in the United States show a decrease, especially District No. 1, marked increases have occurred in Districts Nos. 3, 4 and 7, which much more than counterbalance the falling off in No. 1.

District No. 4 has gained something like 350 members, while in District No. 7 the increase amounts to over 550 members, or about 25 per cent., since January 1, 1901.

Every European district shows a gain, especially District No. 8 (Germany). No reports have yet arrived from the Oriental lodges.

The membership of the Order, exclusive of the Oriental lodges and the auxiliary lodges in this country, amounts to about 25,000, a gain of about 10 per cent.

A marked feature of this increase is that it consists almost entirely of non-endowment members. Almost every American district shows a loss in endowment members during the past year, yet in almost every one the non-endowment element has been strengthened, so as to more than overcome the loss in the endowment class; and in District No. 7 the non-participants have come into the majority.

The life insurance feature of the Order is gradually dying out, and the places of the participating members are being taken by young men, eager to further the welfare of their co-religionists.

Although the endowment reserves in nearly all the districts are in a very satisfactory condition, the participating membership continues to decrease.

GALVESTON DISASTER

A few days after the occurrence of the Galveston flood, the President of the Order received a telegram from the President of District No. 7, stating that the district was unable to cope with the exigencies created by the disaster, and calling upon the Order at large for aid in meeting the crisis. A general appeal was thereupon issued by the President to the various districts in this country.

About $27,000 was collected, and through the various committees formed at Galveston, Houston, and New Orleans, effective aid was given to about 225 persons and families toward improving their condition and starting them in life afresh.

ROUMANIAN MOVEMENT

Since the movement began in June of last year, approximately 2400 Roumanians have been distributed to about 220 towns and cities in this country. Most of the Roumanians have become self-supporting, notwithstanding the fact that the movement began but a year ago.

DENVER HOSPITAL

The subscription voted by the Chicago Convention to the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver has been paid as the same fell due, about $3000 having been remitted to the Secretary of that institution since January 1, 1901.

CHAUTAUQUA

The union with the Jewish Chautauqua has already taken practical shape, but the movement is yet in its infancy. Greater results are expected as the matter progresses.

INSTITUTIONS

Notwithstanding the strain placed upon the lodges by the Galveston disaster and the Roumanian immigration, the various charities and institutions under the auspices of the Order have received continuous support.

INDEPENDENT ORDER FREE SONS OF ISRAEL *

The Order reports $900,000 as the amount of its Reserve Fund; $3,533,000 have been paid to widows, orphans, and beneficiaries; $3,160,000 have been paid by lodges of the Order for benefits and donations; the number of lodges is 103, with funds amounting to $331,056.57. The meeting of the Executive Committee of the United States Grand Lodge was held at Chicago, February 18, 1901, Grand Master Julius Harburger presiding.

INDEPENDENT ORDER FREE SONS OF JUDAH *

The report of the Grand Secretary for 1900, a year intermediate between two biennial meetings, contains the following facts: Total assets of the Order, $21,513.99; receipts during 1900, $57,129.96; disbursements, $56,901.87; total membership, 5311, of which 2646 were newly initiated during 1900; number of lodges, 100, of which 46 were installed during 1900; number of women's lodges, 5.

INDEPENDENT ORDER SONS OF BENJAMIN †

A special convention of the Independent Order Sons of Benjamin was held in New York City, May 5, 1901. There were present 188 delegates, and the President of the Order, Hon. Ferdinand Levy, occupied the chair. The object of the convention was to make important changes in the constitution of the Order, so that it might comply with new conditions imposed by the Insurance Department of the State of Massachusetts, which requires that the wives of members must themselves be members of the Order to enable them to receive the endowment or death benefit paid by the Order. Accordingly, married women may now become members of the Order under the same conditions, and with the same duties and privileges as men, and hereafter no women's lodges can be instituted. Furthermore, the form of physician's certificate on examination of candidates for membership was changed with a view to the better protection of the Order.

The death payments of the Order amount to ten cents per death for men and five cents for women.

The next biennial session of the Order will be held July 6, 1902, in Philadelphia, instead of at Detroit.

THE JEWISH CHAUTAUQUA †

The Fifth Summer Assembly of the Jewish Chautauqua was held at Atlantic City, N. J., from July 7 to 28, 1901. The sessions of the Assembly were opened with prayer by Rabbi Michael Fried. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Dr. Mark Blumenthal, the President, Rev. Dr. H. Berkowitz, the Chancellor, and Isaac Hassler, Esq., the Director. A report of the first State Convention of Chautauqua Circles, held in Wheeling, W. Va., on June 15 to 16, was submitted by Rabbi Harry Levi.

The following courses of lectures were delivered: On "Job," by Professor Max Margolis, seven lectures; on "The Jew of the Sixteenth Century," by Rev. Maurice H. Harris, five lectures; on "American Jewish History," by Cyrus Adler and Dr. Richard Gottheil, three lectures; on "Life in Bible Times," by Joseph Jacobs, two lectures; and on "Jewish Ethics," by Rev. Dr. K. Kohler, three lectures.

A course of thirty lessons in Hebrew, offered by Gerson B. Levi, extended throughout the three weeks of the Assembly, and were attended by four persons. Mr. Levi also gave illustrative lessons to children.

Conferences were held on the following three subjects: on "Social Side of Synagogue Life," led by Rev. Dr. Joseph Stolz and Mrs. Rebekah Kohut; on "Settlement Work among Poor Jews," led by James B. Reynolds, Miss Lillian D. Wald, and Meyer Bloomfield; and on "Jewish Immigration Problems," presented by Dr. C. S. Bernheimer, Miss Anna F. Davies, Rev. Dr. H. Berkowitz, Lee K. Frankel, Miss Rose Sommerfeld, Rev. D. Blaustein, Miss Schoenfeld, Miss Minnie L. Baldauf, and Miss Belle Maud Goldsmith.

Papers were presented as follows: on "The Jew in English Fiction," by Rabbi Harry Levi; on "American Jewish Poets," by Rabbi Joseph Leiser; and on "Romance of Modern Research," by Rev. Clifton Harby Levy.

The department of Religious School Work was conducted together with a School of Practice, by Miss Corinne Arnold. Papers were read by Charles G. Trumbull, on "The Ways of Working in a Sunday School"; by Miss Arnold, on "Practical Problems of the Religious School"; and by J. Cleveland Cady, on "Ideal Buildings for Religious Instruction." An Open Air Kindergarten, attended by twenty-five pupils, was conducted by Miss Addie Rosenberg, who gave several illustrative lessons.

The following were the speakers in the Popular Lecture Course: Rev. Dr. S. S. Wise, on "The American Mission to the Jews and the Jewish Mission in America"; Professor Leon H. Vincent, four lectures, on "Hawthorne," "Lowell," "Thackeray," and "George Eliot"; Wu Ting-Fang, on "Moses and Confucius"; Hon. Simon Wolf, on "The Jew in Public Life;" and Hon. Mayer Sulzberger, on "Tendencies."

The social features were: a reception to the Rev. Dr. H. Berkowitz, the Chancellor; a dinner to Wu Ting-Fang; and a musical and literary entertainment.

Divine services were held on Friday evenings and Saturday mornings and afternoons. Sermons were delivered by the following: Rabbi Harry Levi, Rabbi Joseph Stolz, Rabbi Marcus Salzman, Rabbi Joseph Leiser, Rev. Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, and Rabbi Joseph Silverman. Children's Services were held on Saturday afternoons, conducted by the Rev. Dr. H. Berkowitz, and sermonettes were delivered by him and Mrs. Jacob H. Hecht.

The final session was presided over by Mr. William B. Hackenbourg. Reports were presented by the Director, Isaac Hassler, the Treasurer, Max Herzberg, and the Field Secretary, Mrs. Minnie D. Louis. The receipts for the year were $4392.36, including a balance of $225.66; and the disbursements, $3939.54, leaving a balance of $452.82 in the treasury. The Field Secretary reported the organization of 15 new Chautauqua Circles.

A number of resolutions were adopted, and the following officers, trustees, and members of the Educational Council elected:

Chancellor, Rev. Dr. H. Berkowitz, of Philadelphia, Pa.; President, Dr. Mark Blumenthal, of New York City; Treasurer, Louis Wolf, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Director, Isaac Hassler, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Board of Trustees: Dr. Lee K. Frankel, of New York; William B. Hackenburger, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Charles Heidelberger, of Philadelphia; Leo N. Levi, of New York; Mrs. Fannie Muhr, of Philadelphia; Jacob H. Schiff, of New York; Dr. Lewis Steinbach, of Philadelphia; Benjamin F. Teller, of Philadelphia; Mrs. J. H. Hecht, of Boston, Hon. Simon Wolf, of Washington; William Gerstley, of Philadelphia; Jacob Gimbel, of Philadelphia; Max Herzberg, of Philadelphia; Leon Dalsimer, of Philadelphia; Milton Goldsmith, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Eli Strouse, of Baltimore; Adolph S. Ochs, of New York, and Benjamin F. Greenewald, of Philadelphia.

Educational Council: David Werner Amram, Dr. Charles S. Bernheimer, Rev. Julius H. Greenstone, Mrs. Isaac Gimbel, Mrs. Felix N. Gerson, Miss Corinne B. Arnold and Miss Ida Casseres, of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. K. Kohler, Professor Richard Gottheil, Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, Miss Rose Sommerfeld, Miss Julia Richman, and Dr. H. M. Leipziger, of New York; Rabbi Harry Levi, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Rev. Dr. Joseph Stolz, of Chicago.

THE JEWISH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY ASSOCIATION *

On March 2, 1901, the association lost its President, the Honorable Joseph Blumenthal, who had been at its head since its organization, fifteen years ago. The Seventh Biennial Report contains, as an appendix, a paper on "Neo-Hebraic Literature in America," by Bernard Drachman, Ph. D., Dean of the Jewish Theological Seminary.

THE MACCABEAN LEAGUE†

A convention was called by the Touro Cadets, of Providence, R. I., to meet at Newport, R. I., on July 28, 1901, for the purpose of promoting physical culture among the Jews. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Eugene Schreier, Chairman of the Convention Committee, and prayer was offered by Rev. B. Grad, of Providence. After committees were appointed, an address was made by Mr. Spidel, on "The Ghetto and Physical Culture."

At the evening meeting a permanent national organization was effected. The name of the organization is to be "The Maccabean League."

The following officers were elected: President, Eugene

Schreier, Newport, R. I.; Treasurer, Louis Goldberg, Bangor Me.; Secretary, Samuel Mason, 202 Charles Street, Providence, R. I. The Executive Committee is to consist of the officers and seven additional members.

The next convention is to be held in Boston, Mass.

THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL ASSOCIATION *

The fourth annual meeting took place October 18, 1900, at the rooms of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Philadelphia, Pa. The President in his report enumerated the following improvements on the farm: An additional schoolroom in the Zadok Eisner Memorial Laboratory; additional dormitory accommodations in the main building; fitting up of part of the old farm building as a residence for the dean and matron; a new laundry; a tower windmill for the stables; a new sample road to Doylestown, built at the expense of the United States Government. Besides a number of smaller gifts, there were reported a gift of $5000 from Mr. Leonard Lewisohn, of New York, and one of $10,000 from Mr. Max Schoenfeld, of Rorsbach, Switzerland, the latter for the purchase of small farms. A government expert was sent by Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, to instruct the pupils in roadbuilding. The membership of the association is 858; the income, $15,378.25; the expenditures, $15,556.35; and the number of pupils, 28. The following were elected to fill the places of members of the Board of Directors, whose terms had expired: Ralph Blum (President), Herman Jonas (Vice-President), Adolph Eicholz, M. H. Lichten, and Sidney Aloe. Rev. Dr. Jos. Krauskopf was elected Honorary President.

The first graduation exercises of the school were held June 26, 1901. There were eight graduates.

ORDER BRITH ABRAHAM †

The biennial convention of the Order Brith Abraham was held in Chicago, March 3 to 6, 1901. There were present 350 delegates, representing 267 lodges. The Grand Master, Samuel Dorf, reported that in the two years elapsed since the previous convention, $277,527 had been paid out in benefits to widows and orphans. The following recommendations were made by the Grand Master, and adopted: The creation of a reserve fund; a stricter medical examination of candidates; contributions to various hospitals; and, in view of the requirements of certain States, the admission of women to membership and participation in the management of the Order. It was decided to institute lodges admitting both men and women on an equal footing of membership with regard both to duties and to privileges. The endowment tax for members was reduced from five to two cents per capita.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Grand Master, Samuel Dorf, New York City; First Deputy Grand Master, J. C. Bloch, Cleveland; Second Deputy Grand Master, Charles Bonus, Chicago; Third Deputy Grand Master, Emil Mandel, Indianapolis, Ind.; Grand Secretary, Leonard Leisersohn, New York City; Grand Treasurer, Samuel Wolf, New York City; Endowment Treasurer, A. J. Dworsky, New York City.

The next biennial convention will be held in Boston, Mass.

ORDER KESHER SHEL BARZEL †

District Grand Lodge No. 1 held its annual session at Philadelphia, February 24, 1901.

District Grand Lodge No. 4, held its annual session at Cincinnati, April 14, 1901. The endowment fund was reported to have a balance of $70,853.97, and the number of members in the Order to be 679. The expense of the Grand Lodge for two years was $1287.40. The Home for the Aged, at Cleveland, O., harbors 52 inmates, and its maintenance costs $12,000 annually.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Judge F. S. Spiegel, Cincinnati, O.; First Vice-President, M. Levy, Louisville, Ky.; Second Vice-President, Rev. Dr. M. Messing, Indianapolis, Ind.; Secretary, Marx Liebschütz, Cincinnati, O.; Treasurer, Isaac Russack, St. Louis, Mo.

ORTHODOX JEWISH CONGREGATIONAL UNION OF AMERICA †

The Union of Orthodox Congregations held its first biennial session in New York City, December 30, 1900. Ninety-six congregations in the United States and Canada were represented, and the meeting was presided over by the Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes.

The Committee on Presentation recommended that a permanent committee be appointed to make formal and public presentation of Jewish teaching, wherever any official action is taken or official declaration is made in opposition to the principles of Judaism.

The following resolutions were adopted: That the Committee on Presentation be made permanent, and should contain not less than five members; that a committee, to consist of the President, the Secretary, and one other member, be appointed to act whenever occasion requires; that a committee of propaganda be appointed; that a special committee be appointed to collect unpaid dues; that as soon as funds are available, the reports of the Union be published.

The resolution advocating an ecclesiastical council was laid on the table.

The Rev. Hirsch Maslianski addressed the convention, and at a public meeting held in the evening, the following spoke: Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, Rev. Dr. Meldola de Sola, Rabbi Jacob David Wilowsky, Rev. Henry S. Morais, Rev. Dr. B. Drachman, Rev. Julius Greenstone, the Hon. Joseph Blumenthal, and Mr. Rudolph I. Coffee.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes; Vice-Presidents, Rev. Dr. Meldola de Sola, of Montreal; Dr. Aaron Friedenwald, of Baltimore; K. Sarasohn, of New York; and Lewis N. Dembitz of Louisville, Ky.; Secretaries, Israel Hershfield, Max Cohen, J. Buchhalter, and Albert Lucas; Treasurer, Jacob Hecht, of New York. Trustees: Rev. Dr. Philip Klein, Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman, Rev. Dr. S. Schaffer, Dr. Cyrus Adler, Dr. S. Solis Cohen, Rev. Dr. H. W. Schneeberger, S. N. Roeder, Hon. Joseph Blumenthal,¹ Rev. Henry S. Morais, Rev. The income of the Union during the past year was $38,673.83. (The 27th annual report, published January, 1901, contains full details.)

HEBREW UNION COLLEGE

Cincinnati, O.

During the year 1900-1901, the number of registered students was 64, divided into four classes of the Preparatory, and four classes of the Collegiate Department. The faculty consists of five professors and four instructors. At the head stands Professor M. Mielziner, Ph. D., D. D. The subjects of instruction are: Hebrew grammar; Bible, and its commentaries of ancient and modern times; Talmud; rabbinical codes and Midrash; Jewish history and literature; liturgics; Jewish philosophy; ethics; pedagogics and homiletics; Syriac and Arabic.

Special lectures: The Rev. Dr. Emil G. Hirsh, of Chicago, delivered a series of lectures on "The Fundamental Concepts of Jewish Theology."

The annual public examination took place from June 9 to 14, before the appointed examiners—Rev. Dr. Henry Berkowitz, of Philadelphia, and Rev. Dr. L. Mayer, of Pittsburg, Pa. On June 15, the graduation and ordination of the ten senior students took place. The degree of Rabbi was conferred by the acting President on the following: David Alexander, Moise Bergman, Joseph Blatt, Henry Englander, Morris Feuerlicht, Solomon C. Lowenstein, Elias Margolis, Martin A. Meyer, Alfred G. Moses, Leon Volmer. Most of these graduates have accepted positions as Rabbi in different parts of the country. Rabbi Martin A. Meyer, who lately won the Fellowship of the American School of Oriental Study and Research, is going to Palestine to continue his Oriental studies.

The College Library, consisting of about fifteen thousand (15,000) volumes, has, during the last year, been increased by valuable works, partly through purchase, partly through liberal donations.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY BY STATES

INTRODUCTION

The following statistical statements concerning Jewish activity in all departments, in every State and Territory of the United States, except Arizona, Wyoming, and North Dakota, purport to be nothing more than a resumé of the data collected in April-May, 1900, for the issue of 5661 of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK. In those cases, then, in which the organizations addressed responded by sending the last report published by them, the statistics may apply to 1899. No attempt has been made to include the large volume of new matter collected since that time. Some of it, it is proper to say—as, for instance, the additional information on beneficial orders and all national organizations—would carry with it an appreciable modification of the description of national and local conditions.

The first intention was to tabulate the information contained in the two directories of the issue of 5661. When trial was made, it appeared that, rich as the material at command was, there was after all a paucity of data that would tend to make bare tables misleading, and would necessitate a number of cumbersome footnotes, interfering with the simplicity and therefore the usefulness of the tables. The form in which the data are here presented, it was thought, minimized the danger of misrepresentation by granting the opportunity of adducing modifications and explanatory circumstances when necessary.

However, even the freedom of comment thus gained does not remove the necessity of making some general statements in order to put the statistical articles fairly before the reader. In the first place, certain organizations serve a variety of purposes, they cannot always be labeled with absolute and unexceptionable precision, and sometimes must be counted in under several headings. The line between educational and charitable endeavor is almost invisible; industrial classes, for instance, are conducted by Ladies' Benevolent Societies, by Sections of the Council of Jewish Women, and even by congregations. The most striking instance is afforded by Orphan Asylums. They are charitable institutions, but who would refuse them the description educational? A similar difficulty exists in such organizations as the Young Men's Hebrew Associations, in which social, literary, and educational purposes are inextricably mingled. Even clubs have their social, literary, and musical complexities. It is a truism that life does not lend itself to analysis and tabulation; there is always an unclassifiable residuum. On the other hand, there are scores of societies whose name puts them into the department of charity or of education, but whose work is not described, and the compiler must accept the evidence of the name as final.

Nowhere is complexity of purpose more baffling than in the small town. There the central organization is under our very eyes undergoing the transformation from a Hebrew Cemetery Company, conducting a religious school and administering a relief fund, into a regularly organized congregation, hampered or helped by all the auxiliaries created by the years and clustering about it. Another illustration is seen, in the large cities, in the Russian congregations of recent origin, which are not so much congregations in the American sense of the term—the units of which the Jewish community is composed—as they are communities (Kehilloth) in the European sense. Each has its own Chevra Kadisha, its Chevra Mishnais, its Chevra Gemarah, its Gemiluth Chasodim, sometimes its Malbish Arumim, or its Lechem Lor'ebim, or it may itself constitute a beneficial association. Many of these auxiliary societies to congregations had to be disregarded on account of insufficient data. In general, the income of auxiliary societies has been added to the income of the congregations, unless the reports are explicit in describing them as benevolent, educational, or loan agencies; then they have been classified and treated of under one of these three headings. On the other hand, it was found impossible to take into account the income of independent cemetery companies, especially in the large cities, as in the overwhelming majority of cases the cemetery record is inseparable from the general congregational record. But when the cemetery company dispenses charity, as it usually does in the smaller towns, its income has been added to that under the heading charity.

In using the statistics, the reader should bear several things in mind. About one-third of the facts could not be obtained at first hand, owing to the failure of organizations to respond to the request for information. Yet that does not invalidate them; for the greater part they have since their publication been proved authentic as far as they go; it merely accounts for the paucity of data mentioned above. Again, a large percentage of the organizations that responded disregarded some of the headings on the forms submitted to them. A blank space opposite to a question may not be interpreted as a negative answer. If, for instance, we find that sixteen out of a possible twenty-four congregations in a State report nothing on the subject of religious schools, we are not warranted in concluding that only one-third of the congregations maintain schools. In the large cities many congregations not reporting schools may, indeed, have none of their own, but they contribute their quota to the maintenance of the Talmud Torah institutions (Hebrew Free Schools).

From the above it is evident that the opportunities for omissions, errors, and misinterpretations are not few; yet it is believed that the statistics may serve, through their fulness, to convey a notion of the vigor and versatility of Judaism in America; and through their paucity, to demonstrate the importance of completing and perfecting them.

JEWISH STATISTICS

The statistics of Jews in the world rests largely upon estimates. In Russia, Austria-Hungary, Germany, and a few other countries, official figures are obtainable. In the main, however, the numbers given are based upon estimates repeated and added to by one statistical authority after another. In spite of the unsatisfactoriness of the method, it may be assumed that the numbers given are approximately correct.

THE UNITED STATES

As the census of the United States has, in accordance with the spirit of American institutions, taken no heed of the religious convictions of American citizens, whether native-born or naturalized, all statements concerning the number of Jews living in this country, are based upon estimate, though several of the estimates have been most concientiously made.

The Jewish population was estimated

In 1818 by Mordecai M. Noah at	3,000
In 1826 by Isaac C. Harby at	6,000
In 1840 by the American Almanac at	15,000
In 1848 by M. A. Berk at	50,000
In 1880 by Wm. B. Hackenburg at.....	230,257
In 1888 by Isaac Markens at.....	400,000
In 1897 by David Sulzberger at.....	937,800
In 1899 by the American Jewish Year Book at	1,043,800
In 1900 " " " " " " " "	1,058,135

The following table by States is a modification of that given in the previous Year Book. New estimates were secured from many sources, but they varied so much that the figures have been changed only where some corroborative evidence has been furnished.

The total Jewish immigration to the United States, through the ports of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, from 1881 to July 1, 1901, was 644,966. This does not take into account immigration through Canada or at ports other than those mentioned above. The immigration at the port of New York from July 1, 1899, to June 30, 1900, was as follows:

Austrians	13,004
Danes	1
Dutch	25
English	125
French	55
Germans	289
Roumanians	5,613
Russians	24,927
Swedes	15
Turks	147
Irish	5
Norwegians	2
Total	———	44,208

At the port of Philadelphia the immigration for the year ending November 1, 1900, was 3870 against 1649 for the preceding year.

At the port of Baltimore the immigration from July 1, 1900, to June 30, 1901, was 1343.¹

¹ For a more detailed statement of Jewish immigration into the United States see the Year Book for 5660, pp. 283-284. The Philadelphia Immigration Society furnishes its reports up to November, each year.

SELECTED HEBRAICA AND JUDAICA

Compiled by ISRAEL ABRAHAMS

This list is compiled, as regards inclusions and exclusions, on the same principles as last year's. But it has been made rather fuller. An innovation is the addition of Descriptive Notes in many instances. These Notes are not intended to be critical except very rarely. They are designed to give the reader fuller information as to the character or contents of the book named. Where no Notes are added, the compiler of the list has felt that the title is sufficient description; but in some cases his silence is due to his own ignorance of anything more than the title. The majority of the books entered have, however, passed through his hands.

E. A. ABBOTT. (1) Clue, a Guide through Greek to Hebrew Scripture (1900).
(2) The Corrections of Mark (1901).

The first parts of a series entitled Diatessarica dealing with the interpretation of the Gospels (London, A. & C. Black). Full of interest to Jewish students. The author makes use of Rabbinic sources.

C. ADLER. The American Jewish Year Book 5661 (Philadelphia, the Jewish Publication Society of America, 1900).

C. ADLER AND I. M. CASANOWICZ. Descriptive Catalogue of a Collection of Objects of Jewish Ceremonial Deposited in the U. S. National Museum by Hadji Ephraim Benguiat (Washington, Government Printing Office, 1901).

Illustrated by 36 plates. A valuable addition to the literature of Art as applied to Judaism. Much useful information is given on points of Jewish rites and worship.

AMHERST PAPYRI.

Part I of a description of the Greek Papyri in the collection of Lord Amherst. The Ascension of Isaiah, etc. With nine plates. Edited by B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt (London, 1900). The volume also contains fragments of Genesis (I, 1-5), according to the LXX and Aquila, Job I, 21: 11, 3; Psalms CVIII, CXVIII, CXXXV, CXXXVIII-CXL.

A. APFELBAUM. R. Jehuda Moscato (Drohobycz, 1900).

A Hebrew biography of the Mantuan Rabbi (16th Century), an account of his works נפוצות יהודה and קול יהודה, and of his commentary on the Cusari, etc., with chapters on his contemporaries in Italy, and on his unpublished poems.

L. BACH. Der Glaube nach den Anschauungen des A. T. (Gütersloh, Bertelsmann, 1901).

On the meaning of האמין.

W. BACHER. Ein Hebräisch-Persisches Wörterbuch aus dem vierzehnten Jahrhundert (Buda-Pest, 1900).

Prefixed to the 23d "Jahresbericht" of the Buda-Pest Rabbinical Seminary.

B. BAENTSCH. Exodus-Leviticus (Göttingen, Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1900).

Part of the Hand-Kommentar zum A. T. Translation and notes. Critical analysis consistently indicated.

W. BALDENSPERGER. Das spätere Judenthum als Vorstufe des Christenthums (Giessen, Ricker, 1900).

A fair-minded recognition that Jewish thought did not terminate with the close of the Biblical Canon. Based, however, rather on Apocrypha and pseud-epigraphic writings than on Rabbinical sources.

BAMBERGER. Die Juden der Stadt und d. ehemal. Fürstent. Aschaffenburg (Strasburg, Singer, 1900.)

E. BANETH. Mischnaïot. Seder Moed (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1901).

Continuation of an excellent edition of the Mishnah, by several scholars. Hebrew punctuated text with German translation and notes. Present part (xxxii) contains Pesachim, Chs. vi-viii.

S. BARON. Saudia Al-fajjumi's arabische Psalmenübersetzung (Erlangen, 1900).

Contains Psalms 50-72.

BARTHAUER. Optimismus und Pessimismus in Kohelet (Halle, Dissertation, 1900.)

J. G. BARTHOLOMEW. Topographical and Physical Map of Palestine (London, 1901).

L. W. BATTEN. The Old Testament from the Modern Point of View (New York, Gorham, 1901).

H. C. BATTERBY. Handbook to the Pentateuch (London, Rivington, 1901).
Creation to Exodus (Genesis i—Exodus xii).

S. BEHRENS. Maimuni's Mischnah-Kommentar zum Tractat Megillah (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Arabic with Joseph ibn Al-Fawwal's Hebrew translation.

E. BEN-JEHOUDA. Millon (Jerusalem, Hashkafa, 1900-1).

Two parts of a new Hebrew Dictionary, embracing Biblical, Rabbinical, Medieval, and Modern Hebrew. The words are translated into French and German. Reaches as far as אורח.

R. M. BENSON. Way of Holiness (London, Methuen, 1901).

A commentary, analytical and devotional, on the 119th Psalm. There is now a reversion in favor of the spiritual worth of this Psalm, after the attacks of some of the higher critics.

I. BENZINGER. Die Bücher der Chronik (Tübingen, Mohr, 1901).

Part of Marti's Kurzer Hand-Kommentar; introduction and notes, but no consecutive translation.

S. BERNFELD. Der Talmud. Sein Wesen, seine Bedeutung, und seine Geschichte (Berlin, 1900).

S. BERNFELD. History of Reform in Judaism (Warsaw, Achiasaf, 1900.)

The work (written in Hebrew) has the Hebrew title תולדות הריפורמציון. היהדות בישראל. It is an impartial chronicle.

A. BERTHOLET. Leviticus (Tübingen, Mohr, 1901).

Part of Marti's Kurzer Hand Kommentar; has introduction and notes, but no consecutive translation.

BESTMANN. Entwicklungsgeschichte des Reiches Gottes unter dem alten und neuen Bunde (Leipzig, Deichert, 1900).

M. BRANN and F. ROSENTHAL. Memorial volume in honor of the late Prof. David Kaufmann. With Hebrew title, תהלה לזכרו, and German, Gedenkbuch zur Erinnerung an David Kaufmann (Breslau, Schles.-Buchdruckerei, 1900).

Contains a Biography of Kaufmann (Rosenthal), a bibliography of Kaufmann's writings (Brann), and a large number of contributions by various scholars in Hebrew, German, French, and English (a large volume of lxxxvii, 682, and 112 pages). See also under Kaufmann, below.

H. BRODY. Abu Ajjub b. Juhja Ibn Gabirol (Berlin, Poppelauer, 1900).
Secular Poems.

H. BRODY. Diwan des Abu-l-Hassan Jehuda Ha-levi (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1900).

Second part of the first volume of a complete edition of Jehuda Halevi's Poems. This part continues the Notes (in Hebrew) on the Secular Poems.

BROWN-GESENIUS. A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Oxford, Clarendon Press).

Part IX of this revision of Gesenius' Lexicon by Dr. Francis Brown, with the co-operation of Professors Driver and Briggs. The best Hebrew Lexicon extant. This part includes ערער to ספה.

R. BROWNING. Rabbi Ben Ezra (London, Bell, 1901).

A beautiful edition of Browning's Poem, with a prose paraphrase and an account of the life of Abraham Ibn Ezra (whose career, however, is not strongly reflected in the poem).

S. BUBER. Sechel Tob (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1900).

Commentary to Genesis and Exodus, written in 1139 by Menachem ben Shelomoh. Hitherto inedited. Buber supplies introduction and notes.

H. P. CHAJES. Beiträge zur nordsemitischen Onomatologie (Vienna, Gerold, 1900).

A comparison of the Jewish names in Josephus, the New Testament, the Rabbinic Talmudic literature, with the names found in North Semitic (especially Palmyrene) Inscriptions. A fine piece of work in a new field.

R. H. CHARLES. The Ascension of Isaiah (London, Black, 1901).

The Ethiopic text, the new Greek fragments, and the Latin translation are given, and an English translation from the Ethiopic. Introduction and notes.

C. CLERMONT-GANNEAU. Répertoire d'épigraphie sémitique (Paris, Imprimerie Nationale, 1900).

An "occasional" record of Semitic inscriptions, with tentative readings and renderings, preliminary to their inclusion in the "Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum." The first issue contains 51 inscriptions, Phœnician and Palmyrene.

T. K. CHEYNE AND J. S. BLACK. Encyclopædia Biblica (London, A. and C. Black, 1901).

Vol. II, containing E to K. Very strong on the philological side. The critical analysis is applied to New Testament as well as to Old. The smaller articles are especially good. On the whole, a very trustworthy and original work, edited with conspicuous care and thoroughness.

COLLEGIO RABBINICO ITALIANO. Relazione sul Biennio 1899-1900 (Florence, 1901).

Report of the new Rabbinical Seminary in Florence, with a memorial address on Samuel David Luzzatto (on the centenary of his birth, August, 1900), by Dr. I. Elbogen. See also LUZZATTO, below.

A. W. COOKE. Palestine in Geography and in History (London, Kelly, 1901). Vol. II.

C. H. CORNILL. Israelitisch. Prophetismus (Strasburg, Trübner, 1900).

C. H. CORNILL. Die metrischen Stücke des Buches Jeremia (Leipzig, Hinrichs, 1901).

H. CREMER. Greifswalder Studien (Gütersloh, Bertelsmann, 1900).

Among contents are "Kultus bei Amos und Hosea" (Oettli), and "Rolle und Codex" (Schultze).

G. H. DALMAN. Christianity and Judaism (London, Williams and Norgate, 1901).

Translated from the German by the Rev. G. H. Box. An essay distinguished by frankness and fairness.

N. DAVIS. Songs of Exile (Philadelphia, Jewish Publication Society, 1901).

Metrical translations from medieval Hebrew poets, with original poems.

E. DAY. The Social Life of the Hebrews (London, Nimmo, 1901).

Part I. "The Time of the Judges" deals with the "Clan," the "Family," the "Social Significance of Sacrifice," "Industry," &c. Part II. "The Time of the Monarchy" deals with "The Passing of the Clan," "Village and City Life," "Warfare," "Literature and Education," "Laws," "Sickness and Death," &c. Useful, but much space is occupied with merely historical and literary matter. ("The Semitic Series.")

G. A. DEISSMANN. Bible Studies (Edinburgh, Clark, 1901).

Contributions from papyri and inscriptions to the history of the language, the literature, and the religion of Hellenistic Judaism and Primitive Christianity.

- H. DERENBOURG AND M. LAMBERT. R. Saadia ben Josef al-Fayyumi, version arabe du livre de Job (Paris, Leroux, 1900).

Part V of the complete edition (in French) of Saadia's works begun by the late Joseph Derenbourg. With biographical introduction.

- G. DIETRICH. Eine jakobitische Einleitung in den Psalter, in Verbindung mit zwei Homilien aus dem grossen Psalmenkommentar des Daniel von Salah (Giessen, Ricker).

The fifth of the "Beihefte" (special supplements) to Stade's "Zeitschrift für die alttestamentliche Wissenschaft".

- I. DEUTSCH. Die Regierungszeit der jüdischen Königin Salome Alexandra (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

- J. N. DIEPOLDER. Der Tempelbau der vorchristlichen und christlichen Zeit (Leipzig, 1900).

Architecture in the service of religion among Pagans, Jews, Mohanmedans, and Christians. With 200 illustrations.

- B. DRACHMAN. Neo-Hebraic Literature in America.

An Appendix to Proceedings of the Jewish Theological Seminary Association. (New York, Cowen, 1900.)

- S. R. DRIVER. Daniel (Cambridge Bible, Cambridge, University Press, 1900).

The most useful commentary on Daniel in the English language. The person of Daniel, the history embraced by the Book, Authorship and Date, characteristic features (Apocalypse, the Kingdom of God, the Resurrection, Doctrine of Angels), Versions and Commentaries, are fully discussed in introduction. The notes are also ample and illuminative.

- S. M. DUBNOW. History of the Jews (Odessa, 1901).

First part of a complete history from the earliest times. Written in Russian. The author strikes a new note. His previous sketch (German), "Die jüdische Geschichte" (Berlin, Calvary, 1898), proved him a competent and independent successor to Graetz.

- W. EBSTEIN. Die Medizin im Alten Testament (Stuttgart, Enke, 1900).

ECCLESIASTICUS, FACSIMILES OF THE FRAGMENTS HITHERTO RECOVERED OF THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTICUS IN HEBREW.

This reproduction of the Hebrew Ben Sira is made from four distinct MSS. Scholars are now almost unanimous in regarding these fragments as a genuine, though corrupt, remnant of the original Hebrew. The facsimiles are the joint product of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge (1901).

- ENCYCLOPEDIA, THE JEWISH. (New York and London, Funk and Wagnalls, 1901).

First volume reaching from Aach to Apocalyptic Literature. Edited by an Editorial Board, whose managing head is Dr. I. Singer. Profusely illustrated. The Encyclopedia bids fair to prove a masterly work of reference on all subjects affecting Jews and Judaism.

- W. ERBT. Die Purimsage in der Bibel (Berlin, Reimer, 1900).

Research into the Book of Esther, and the employment of the story and its like in later Judaism. A study in comparative religion.

E. FAURE. La sagesse divine dans la littérature didactique des hébreux et des juifs (Montauban, 1900, Thesis).

J. FLEMMING AND L. RADERMACHER. Apocalypse des Henoch (Leipzig, 1901).

Contains revised Greek text (Papyri found in Gizeh in 1886) and a translation of Ethiopic text based on 14 MSS.

MAURICE FLUEGEL. Cabala and Philosophy (Baltimore, 1901).

F. FRANK. Der Ritualmord (Regensburg, Manz, 1901)

A strong protest against the charge of Ritual Murder raised against Jews by anti-Semites. The author is a Catholic priest, and his work is worthy of a place beside the notable treatises of Strack.

J. G. FRAZER. The Golden Bough, a Study in Magic and Religion (London and New York, Macmillan, 1900).

Second edition, in three volumes. In its revised form, the work deals more fully with the Biblical material. The title hardly prepares the reader for the wealth of illustration on many fundamental points in the history of religious ideas and institutions. Quite apart from Mr. Frazer's conclusions and theories, the work is most useful for its collections of facts.

S. FRIED. Israeli, das Buch über die Elemente (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Contribution to Medieval Religious Philosophy of the Jews.

M. FRIEDLÄNDER. Synagog. Gottesdienst nach d. Bibel, d. Talmud, und d. Aussprüchen der Weisen in Israel (Brünn, Epstein, 1900).

A. FRIEDMANN. Geschichte der Juden in Ingolstadt (Ingolstadt, Krüll, 1900).

A. GALL. Zusammensetzung und Herkunft der Bileam-Perikope (Giessen, 1900).

A. GALL. Die Herrlichkeit Gottes, eine biblisch-theologische Untersuchung, ausgedehnt auf das A. T., die Targume, Apokryphen, Apokalypsen und das N. T. (Giessen, Ricker, 1900).

קדוש, שכינתא, יקר, כבוד On

A. F. GALLÉ. Daniel (Paris, 1900, Dissertation).

With commentaries of Saadia, Ibn-Ezra, Rashi, &c., and variants of the Arabic and Syriac versions.

J. GALLINER. Abraham Ibn Ezra's Hiobkommentar auf seine Quellen untersucht (1901).

M. GASTER. Hebrew Illuminated Bibles of the IXth and Xth Centuries, (Codices Or. Gaster, Nos. 150 and 151), and a Samaritan Scroll of the Law of the XIth Century (Codex Or. Gaster, No. 350).

Eight plates of facsimiles of these MSS. and of fragments from the Geniza in Egypt accompany the text. The text is reprinted from the Proceedings of the Society for Biblical Archeology, June, 1900, but the plates are only published in the separate edition (London, 1901). The plates are very beautifully reproduced.

M. GASTER. History of the Ancient Synagogue of the Spanish and Portuguese Jews, the Cathedral Synagogue of the Jews in England (London, 1901).

Not published; printed for presentation only. A memorial of the bicentenary of the Synagogue. Numerous facsimiles, illustrations and portraits. An important contribution to the history of the Jews in England.

L. GAUTIER. Autour de la Mer Morte (Geneva, Eggiman, 1901).
Many illustrations and a map.

GIEBE. Das hebr. Adjekt. in d. Psalmen in etymol. und syntakt. Hinsicht (Göttingen, Naumburg, 1900).

F. GIESEBRECHT. Die Geschichtlichkeit des Sinaibundes untersucht (Königsberg, Beyer, 1900).

A. GLOVER. Jewish Laws and Customs (Wells, Minn., Hammond, 1900).
A readable and well-intentioned commentary on "Children of the Ghetto." Bible usages explained by modern Jewish custom.

M. J. DE GOEJE. Memoires d'histoire et de géographie orientales (Leyden, 1900).
On the conquest of Syria.

S. GORDON. Sons of the Covenant (Philadelphia, Jewish Publication Society, 1900).
A novel dealing with the East-End problem in London.

G. B. GRAY. Divine Discipline of Israel (New York and London, 1900).
An address, which gives the title to the book, and three lectures on the "Growth of Moral Ideas in the Old Testament". The sub-heads are: "The Divine Morality"; "Its Relation to Human Conduct"; "The Holiness of Jehovah and Man"; "The Righteousness of Jehovah and Man"; "Individual Responsibility"; "Ideals of Human Conduct"; "The Motive of Conduct".

B. GRENFELL AND OTHERS. Fayum Towns and their Papyri (London, Publications of Egyptian Exploration Fund, 1901).

C. GROSS. The Sources and Literature of English History from the earliest times to about 1485 (London and New York, Longmans, 1900).
Indispensable to students of English History. Much useful help is given to workers in the field of Anglo-Judaica.

M. GRÜNBAUM. Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Sprach- und Sagenkunde (Berlin, Calvary, 1901).

This collection of essays by the late Max Grünbaum (1817 1898) is edited by Dr. Felix Perles. A charming character sketch by the editor is followed by a bibliography of Grünbaum's writings; then come "Beiträge zur vergleichenden Mythologie aus der Hagada" (Eigenthümlichkeit der Hagada, Salomon, Schamirsage, Die gefallene Engel, Das Buch Henoch, Goldenes Zeitalter, Entstehung der Götterverehrung, Dämonologie, Der böse Blick, Euphemismus, Beschwörungsformeln, Leviathan, Solstitialfeste, Erfindung der Feuerbereitung, Tekufatropfen, Narthex). Next are "Ueber Schem hammephorasch als Nachbildung eines aramäischen Ausdrucks und über sprachliche Nachbildungen überhaupt", "Die verschiedenen Stufen der Trunkenheit in der Sage dargestellt", "Miscellen" (Der Stern Venus, Die Minim im Talmud), "Assimilationen und Volksetymologien im Talmud", "Die beiden Welten bei den arabisch-persischen und bei den jüdischen Autoren", "Zu Jussuf und Suleicha", "Zu S hiechta-Wssehd's Ausgabe des Jussuf und Suleicha".] All these essays appeared originally in the ZDMG.

L. GRÜNHUT. Sefer ha-likkutim (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Part IV, containing parts of the ancient Midrash Yelamdenu to Numbers; and Part V, containing parts of the same Midrash to Deuteronomy. The work is printed in Jerusalem.

J. GRÜNTAL. Die Syrische Uebersetzung zum Buche Esther (Breslau, 1900, Dissertation).

M. GRÜNWAID. Mittheilungen der Gesellschaft für jüdische Volkskunde (Hamburg, 1901).

Part VII. Contains articles on the Memoirs of Glückel, of Hameln, a Hebrew song for Simchath-Torah from Bukara and Yemen, the names of Angels, Sabbath Songs, Riddles, the Jew in the Silesian Weinachtsspiel. Valuable contribution to Jewish folk-lore.

H. GUNKEL. Genesis (Hand-Kommentar zum alten Testament, Göttingen, Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1901).

Notably original on the archæology of the Creation. The commentary is also strongest on the archæological side. Less useful for mere understanding of the text. The author apparently recognizes that his strength lies in the direction of comparative mythology by issuing the introduction in a separate form under the title, "Die Sagen des Genesis."

H. GUTHE AND L. BATTEN. The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah (Baltimore, John Hopkins Press, 1901).

Part of Haupt's SBOT. Hebrew text in colors.

J. HALÉVY. Dorot Harishonim (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Hebrew. History and Literature of the Jews. Vol. II, Mishnah and Talmud.

J. HALÉVY. Tobie et Akhiakar (Paris, Leroux, 1900).

An interesting study on the parallels to Tobit.

I. HARRIS. Jewish Year Book (London, Greenberg, 1901).

New feature, bibliography of works of reference in Judaica and Hebraica.

D. HARTMANN. Das Buch Ruth in der Midrasch Litteratur (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

J. HASTINGS. A Dictionary of the Bible (Edinburgh, T. and T. Clark, 1900).

Vol III, containing KIR to PLEIADES. An excellent work of reference.

F. HERING. Die homiletische Behandlung des Alten Testaments (Leipzig, Deichert, 1900).

E. HEYCK. Die Kreuzzüge und das hl. Land (Bielefeld, Velhagen, 1900).

Four pictorial appendices, 163 illustrations and 3 maps.

J. HIRSCH. Fragment e. arab. Pentateuch-Uebersetzung (Leipzig, Harrasowitz, 1901.)

M. HIRSCH. Die 12 Propheten, übersetzt und erläutert (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1900).

Hebrew and German.

H. W. HOARE. Evolution of the English Bible (London, Murray, 1901).
A history of the English Versions from 1532 till 1885.

J. HOLZER. Zur Geschichte der Dogmenlehre in der jüdischen Religions-philosophie des Mittelalters (Berlin, Poppelauer, 1901).

Maimonides' introduction to "Chelek" in Arabic, Hebrew translation, and critical notes.

J. HOROVITZ. Untersuchungen über Philons und Platons Lehre von der Welt schöpfung (Marburg, Elwert, 1900).

The author finds in Plato's Timæus the sole origin of Philo's theory of the creation. Useful also for the Logos doctrine.

HORWITZ. Israeliten unter dem Königr. Westfalen (Berlin, Calvary, 1900).

HENRY ILIOWIZI. The Weird Orient (Philadelphia, Coates, 1900).

J. ISSAVERDENS. Uncanonical Writings of the Old Testament (Venice, 1901).

Texts from the Armenian MSS. in the Library of St. Lazarus. This contains III Esdras with Armenian text and English translation on opposite pages.

M. JASTROW. A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature (New York, Putnam's).

Part XIII of this work, unique of its kind in English. This part extends from פיתורה to צנע.

D. KAUFMANN. A Collection of Hungarian Memoirs on Kaufmann (Budapest, 1900).

Published by the Students' Union. Contains papers on Kaufmann's career, his works, his attitude towards anti-Semitism. Compare entry above under BRANN.

E. KAUTZSCH. Übungsbuch (Leipzig, Vogel, 1901).

Exercises for use with Kautzsch's 26th edition of Gesenius' Hebrew Grammar. This is the fifth edition of the exercises.

M. KAYSERLING. Die Juden von Toledo (Leipzig, Kaufmann, 1900).

A popular sketch.

F. G. KENYON. Facsimiles of Biblical MSS. in the British Museum (London, 1901).

To illustrate Greek, Latin and English copyists' work. 25 splendid plates, the earliest a fragmentary Greek psalter (Papyrus of third century), the latest the second Wycliff Bible (15th century). The collection is a real aid to the study of Biblical palæography.

KNOPPING-ROUBIN. Islam und Judaismus (Leipzig, Kaufmann, 1900).

A popular criticism of the Koran.

J. KOEBERLE. Die geistige Kultur der semitischen Völker (Leipzig, Deichert, 1901).

Fully recognizes what the world owes to the Semitic genius, but contrasts the lasting effects of Hebraic as against other forms of the Semitic influence.

J. KOEBERLE. Natur und Geist nach der Auffassung des Alten Testaments (Munich, Beck, 1901).

The Psychology of the Hebrew Bible.

E. KOENIG. Hebräisch und Semitisch (Berlin, Reuther und Reichard, 1901).

Prolegomena to a history of Semitic languages. On the origin of language in general, on modern Semitic tongues as throwing light on the ancient, on the relative antiquity of the Semitic tongues and the historical position of Hebrew, on Arabic and "Ur Semitisch," on Assyrian and Phœnician-Hebrew, Excursus on the speech of Israel before the time of Joshua, on the Arabisms in the Old Testament, on Arabic and Aramaic.

E. KOENIG. Stilistik, Rhetorik, Poetik in Bezug auf die biblische Litteratur. Komparativisch dargestellt (Leipzig, 1900).

A very able discussion of poetical form in Hebrew.

E. KOENIG. Das Berufungsbewusstsein der alttestamentlichen Propheten (Barmen, 1900).

Moderately "conservative" in tendency.

A. KOHUT. Berühmte israelitische Männer und Frauen (Leipzig, Payne, 1900).

Famous Jews in art, science, politics, &c. With many portraits. A popular record of Jewish contributions to modern culture.

R. KRAETZSCHMAR. Das Buch Ezechiel (Göttingen, Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1900).

Part of the Hand-Kommentar zum A. T. Translation and Notes.

R. KRAETZSCHMAR. Prophet und Seher im alten Israel (Tübingen, Mohr, 1901).

Another illustration of the tendency, noticeable during the past year, to popularize the results of the higher criticism. The scholars are now addressing themselves to the "general reader."

H. KRONER. Maimonides' Kommentar zum Traktat Pesachim (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Arabic text and Hebrew translation.

KUNSTDENKMÄLER, GESELLSCHAFT FÜR ERFORSCHUNG JÜDISCHER, Part I of Mittheilungen (Frankfurt a. M., 1900).

Contains 23 illustrations, including synagogues, ceremonial objects, &c. The Director of the Society is Dr. Frauberger.

G. LATTES. Vita e opere di Elia Benamozegh (Livorno, Belforte, 1901.)

Useful as a survey of Italian Judaism in nineteenth century (Benamozegh lived from 1823 to 1900).

M. LAZARUS. The Ethics of Judaism. Translated from the German by Henrietta Szold (Philadelphia, The Jewish Publication Society of America, 1901).

Part II, The Sanctification of Life the Aim of Morality.

Notwithstanding its Kantian standpoint, the treatise is an acceptable, though individual, presentation of some of the leading tendencies in Jewish ethical thought.

- D. LEIMDÖRFER. Der altbiblische Priestersegen (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

A full homiletic commentary on the priestly benedictions (Numbers vi, 22-27).

- ANNE JOSEPHINE LEVI. Meditations of the Heart.

- M. LEWIN. Wo wären die Zehn Stämme Israels zu suchen? (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Many useful notes on Eldad Ha-Dani and other records of the "Ten Tribes."

- N. S. LIBOWITZ. Leon Modena (New York, Hirsch, 1901).

Hebrew. Second edition revised and enlarged with notes by M. Friedmann, S. J. Halberstam, and S. Rubin.

- G. O. LITTLE. The Royal Houses of Israel and Judah (New York and London, Funk and Wagnalls, 1901).

Eight Lectures. Four Maps.

- A. LUNCZ. Jerusalem (1901).

Vol. V of a Hebrew "Annual," devoted to Palestinian topics of past and present.

- A. LUNCZ. Schwarz' Tebuoth Ha-arez (Jerusalem, 1900).

New edition of Schwarz's (Hebrew) account of the Holy Land. In two parts, one geographical, the other historical. Makes much use of Talmudical sources.

- S. D. LUZZATTO. Ein Gedenkbuch (Berlin, Katz, 1900).

Contributions by Bacher, Berliner, Bernfeld, &c., in memory of the centenary of the birth of S. D. Luzzatto. See COLLEGIO above.

- W. MACINTOSH. Rabbi Jesus, Sage and Saviour (London, Blackwood, 1901).

- A. J. MACLEAN. A Dictionary of the Dialects of Vernacular Syriac (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1901).

The dialects are those spoken by the Eastern Syrians of Kurdistan, North west of Persia, and the Plain of Mosul. Illustrations are added from the dialects of the Jews of Zaku and Azerbaijan.

- M. MARGEL. Der Segen Jakobs (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

Translation and critical examination of Mi-drash Genesis Rabba, chs. 98, 99.

- D. S. MARGOLIOUTH. Lines of Defence of the Biblical Revelation (London, Hodder and Stoughton, 1900).

Original and paradoxical.

K. MARTI. Daniel (Tübingen, Mohr, 1901).

Part of the Kurzer Hand-Kommentar zum A. T. Introduction and notes, no consecutive translation.

C. MATHIOT. Etude sur les citations de l'Ancien Testament dans l'épître de St. Paul aux Romains (Cahors, Coulesant, 1901).

S. MAYBAUM. Die ältesten Phasen in der Entwicklung der jüdischen Predigt (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1901).

Prefixed to the 19th "Bericht" of the Berlin "Lehranstalt für die Wissenschaft des Judenthums." This part of Dr. Maybaum's Essay treats of the introductory formulæ of Rabbinical addresses especially in the Halachic disquisitions of the Midrash. Throws new light on the forms in which such addresses were cast.

J. F. MCCURDY. History, Prophecy and Monuments, or Israel and the Nations (New York, Macmillan, 1901).

Vol. III, completing the work.

H. M. MCILHANY. The Holy Spirit in the Old Testament (Staunton, Va., 1900, Thesis).

O. MEUSEL. Die Stellung der Sprüche Salomos in der israelitischen Literatur und Religionsgeschichte (Leipzig, Pöschel, 1900).

J. MEYOHAS. Bath-Chayil (Jerusalem, 1901).

The first book of its kind. A Hebrew reading book for Jewish girls, by the head Hebrew teacher of the Evelina School in Jerusalem. Subjects chiefly domestic. The Hebrew is punctuated.

C. G. MONTEFIORE. The Book of Psalms (London and New York, Macmillan, 1901).

Reprinted from Part II of the same author's "Bible for Home Reading"; contains about four fifths of the Psalter in a new translation, with notes and introductions.

R. G. MOULTON. A Short Introduction to the Literature of the Bible (London, Isbister, 1901).

Independent of the same author's "Literary Study of the Bible".

B. NETELER. Zur Geschichte des alttest. Kanons (Munich, Theissing, 1901).

J. NEUMANN. Der Pentateuch-Kommentar des Joseph Bechor Schor zum Buche Numeri I-XV (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

C. NIEBUHR. The Tell el Amarna Period (London, Nut, 1901).

No. 2 of "The Ancient East." A short, simple, non-controversial, and therefore commendable account of the relations of Egypt and Western Asia in the 15th century, B. C. "The Tablets and how they were found," "The Egyptian Court and Administration," (Amenophis IV and his reforms, Pharaoh and Asiatic Politics), Letters from Asiatic Kings, Letters from Asiatic Vassals (including Abdikheba of Jerusalem and the Habiri and Letters from Women), Political Conditions in the Tell el Amarna Period. The best edition of the Tablets is H. Winckler's (London, Luzac).

B. NIESE. Kritik der beiden Makkabäerbücher (Berlin, Weidmannsche Buchhandlung, 1900).

A very original criticism of the two Books of the Maccabees. Niese holds that the second book is the older and more trustworthy. Though he has failed to establish this thesis, he has thrown much light on the two books. He shows that the death of Antiochus IV occurred in 165-4 B. C.

J. NIKEL. Die Wiederherstellung des jüdischen Gemeinwesens nach dem babylonischen Exil (Freiburg, 1900).

Vol. V, parts 2-3 of "Biblische Studien."

W. NOWACK. Richter-Ruth (Göttingen, Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1900).

Judges and Ruth in the Hand-Kommentar zum A. T. Translation, introduction, and notes. Takes full account of Moore. There is a useful table of the various opinions as to the analysis of Judges according to its sources.

H. OORT. Textus Hebraici Emendationes (Leyden, Brill, 1900).

The emendations of the Massoretic Text adopted by Kuenen, Hooykaas, Kisters, and Oort in their Dutch translation of the Hebrew Bible. Oort writes in Latin.

J. A. PATERSON. The Book of Numbers (Haupt's Polychrome Bible: SBOT, Baltimore, Johns Hopkins Press).

M. PERITZ. Zwei alte arabische Uebersetzungen des Buches Ruth (Berlin, Calvary, 1900).

C. M. PETERS. Wit and Wisdom of the Talmud (New York, Baker and Taylor, 1900).

With an introduction by H. P. Mendes.

S. POZNANSKI. Miscellen über Saadja (Berlin, Calvary, 1901).

Saadia on the calculation of the date of the redemption (the יָיָ of Daniel).

S. POZNANSKI. Tanhoun Yeroushalmi et son commentaire sur le livre de Jonas (Paris, Durlacher, 1900).

Has made Kokowzoff's Russian Version (1897) accessible to students. An allegorical commentary: e. g. Jonah = Dove = the Soul. Much of interest for students of Jewish Mysticism in 13th century.

F. PRAETORIUS. Ueber die Herkunft der hebräischen Accente (Berlin, Reuther und Reichard, 1901).

L. PRINS. Jose b. Jose's Aboda (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1900).

With other piyutim and Abudarham's Commentary. The volume has also the Hebrew title, תְּשׁוּלֹם אֲבוֹדָתָם

S. RAPPOPORT. La liturgie samaritaine (Basel, 1901).

The ritual for the eve of the festivals, Samaritan text and Arabic translation, preceded by a study in the Samaritan liturgy, its origin, and its relations to the liturgies of Jews, Karaites, Christians, and Mohammedans.

J. H. RAVNIZKI. Ha-abib (Warsaw, Schuldberg, 1900).

A Hebrew Reader for Jewish youths. Stories, poems, Biblical character sketches.

T. REINACH. Histoire des Israélites (Paris, Hachette, 1901).

A second edition (first edition, 1884). The book covers the whole field from the loss of Jewish independence till the present day. A capital survey, specially valuable for the history of the Jews of Europe during the last two centuries. Modern movements receive full attention.

U. ROBERT. Heptateuchi partis posterioris versio latina antiquissima e codice Lugdunensi (Lyon, 1900).

With a facsimile.

S. RUBIN. Symbolik der Thiere (Krakow, 1900).

Short but ambitious, this booklet (Hebrew) aims at a comparative study of animal symbolism in the myth and ritual of "all peoples and religions." There is further an excursus on the "Perek Shira." The Hebrew title is סגולות בעלי החיים

N. SAMTER. Was thun? Ein Epilog zu den Judentaufen im 19. Jahrh. (Breslau, Jacobsohn, 1901).

W. SAROWY. Quellenkritische Untersuchung zur Geschichte König Salomos (Königsberg, 1900, Dissertation.)

J. E. SCHERER. Die Rechtsverhältnisse der Juden in den deutsch-österreichischen Ländern (Leipzig, Duncker und Humblot, 1901).

An introduction treats of the principles of legislation as affecting the Jews of Europe in the middle ages. The body of the work deals very thoroughly with the laws prevalent in Austria from the beginning of the 10th century till the 16th century.

F. SCHIEFER. Die religiösen und ethischen Anschauungen des IV Ezra-Buches (Leipzig, Dörffling, 1901).

A study in Jewish religious history.

A. SCHLATTER. Israels Geschichte von Alexander dem Grossen bis Hadrian (Stuttgart, 1900).

Vol. III of "Kingdoms of the Ancient World."

M. SCHLESINGER. Orchoth Chajim (Berlin, Itzkowski, 1900).

Continuation of the Second Part (hitherto unpublished) of Aaron Ha-Kohen of Lüneburg's ritual compilation. Contains laws of Marriage Contracts (Kethuboth), Purification, Divorce, Yibbum, Chalitza, Mezuzah, Challah, Orilah, &c.

N. SCHLOEGL. Ecclesiasticus (Vienna, Mayer, 1901).

P. SCHMALZL. Das Buch Ezechiel (Vienna, Mayer, 1901).

A. SCHULTEN. Die Mosaikkarte von Madaba (Berlin, 1900).

Studies on the Mosaic Map of Palestine discovered at Medeba in 1896. The editor explains Greek inscriptions, compares them with Eusebius' Onomasticon. The map is reproduced.

A. SCHWEIZER, Untersuchungen über die Reste eines hebräischen Textes vom ersten Makkabäerbuch (Berlin, Poppelauer, 1901).

Professor Chwolson published a Hebrew fragment of the First Book of the Maccabees for the Mekize Nirdamim Society in 1896-7. The present work is an attempt to prove that the fragment is original; but the contention is untenable. It is obviously a medieval retranslation.

A. F. SCOT. Offering and Sacrifice (London, 1900).

An essay in comparative customs and religious development.

E. SELLIN. Studien zur Entstehungsgeschichte der jüdischen Gemeinde nach dem babylonischen Exil (Leipzig, 1901).

G. STOSCH. Die Urkunden der Samuelgeschichte (Gütersloh, Bertelsmann, 1900).

Part V of "Old Testament Studies."

D. STRAUSS. Sprachliche Studien zu den hebräischen Sprach-fragmenten (Zurich, 1900).

H. B. SWETE. An Introduction to the Old Testament in Greek (Cambridge, The University Press, 1900).

The first work of its kind. Contains a history of the Alexandrian Greek Version (Septuagint), later Greek Versions (Aquila, Theodotion, Symmachus, the anonymous Greek renderings, known as Quinta, Sexta, and Septima, the Graecus Venetus. Little attention is given to the medieval use of Greek renderings by Jews. Discusses the Hexapla and recensions of the Septuagint, Lucian, and the Ancient Versions based on the Septuagint (Latin, Egyptian, Ethiopic, Arabic, Syriac, Gothic, Armenian, Georgian, and Slavonic). There are chapters on the MSS. of the Septuagint, on printed texts of the Septuagint. This completes Part I. In Part II the contents of the Alexandrian Greek Version are considered: Titles and Order of Books, the Greek of the Septuagint, its merits as a Version, and Text-Divisions. Part III discusses the literary use of the LXX quotations in the New Testament, &c., the value of the LXX as an aid to Biblical study. The last chapter deals with "Textual Condition of the LXX." In an Appendix is the "Letter of Aristeas" (on the origin of the LXX), edited by H. St. J. Thackeray.

G. TAUBENHAUS. Echoes of Wisdom or Talmudic Sayings. Part I.

C. TAYLOR. Hebrew-Greek Cairo Geniza Specimens (Cambridge, University Press, 1900).

From the Taylor-Schechter Collection. Hexaplar Fragment of Psalms XXII, Parts of Aquila's Greek Version of Psalms XC-CIII, and Fragments of the New Testament. With 11 facsimiles.

J. J. TIKKANEN. Die Psalterillustration im Mittelalter (Leipzig, Hirsemann, 1901).

J. VOORSANGER. The Chronicle of Emanu-El.

F. VIGOUROUX. La Sainte Bible Polyglotte (Paris, 1900).

Vol. I contains the Pentateuch in the Hebrew Text, the LXX, the Vulgate, with the variations in the three; Notes, Maps and Illustrations. The French translation of Glaire is added.

J. VREDENBURG. Dutch Translation of the Pentateuch (Amsterdam, 1900).

F. WALTER. Die Propheten in ihrem sozialen Beruf (Freiburg, Herder, 1900.)

A contribution to the history of social ethics.

E. WEILL. Juda Maccabée suini de Rabbi Akiba (Paris, Durlacher, 1901).

Two spirited, popular biographies, intended for the young. With an introductory letter by Zadoc Kahn.

J. WEILL. Antiquités judaïques de Flavius Josèphe (Paris, Leroux, 1900).

Part of a good new French translation of Josephus, with notes. T. Reinach provides an introduction to this volume which includes Books I-V of the Antiquities.

N. I. WEINSTEIN. Die Alexandrinische Agada (Frankfurt a. M., Kauffmann, 1901).

The second part (but the first published) of a work on the Genesis of the Agada. On the "Logos" doctrine in the Agada, the Minim, Palestinian struggle against the inroad of polytheistic ideas.

WESSEL. Targum zum Buche Ruth (Bern, 1900).

J. WELLHAUSEN. Israelitische und jüdische Geschichte (Berlin, Reimer, 1901).

Fourth edition of a brilliant but subjective work. It covers the whole of Jewish history from the earliest times till the rise of Rabbinism and of Christianity. The author shows too much tendency to follow, in his later editions, the line of Willrich in his sceptical attitude towards Jewish sources of information.

P. WENDLAND. Aristeae ad Philocratem Epistola (Leipzig, Teubner, 1900).

The Letter of Aristeas, critically edited (cf. entry under SWETE, above). With Preface, Notes, and Index. Important for students of the Septuagint.

P. WIERNIK. History of the Jews from the Earliest Period to the Present Time (New York, Rabinowitz, 1901).

In Judeo-German, Hebrew type.

II. WILLRICH. Judaica (Göttingen, Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1900).

On Esther and Purim, Judith as a source for the history of Demetrius I of Syria, the Hellenistic and Roman Documents cited in Jewish histories, Hecataeus of Abdera, the Letter of Aristeas, Jason of Cyrene, and II Maccs. Very suggestive but too radical. Some of Willrich's conclusions may be contrasted with those in Niese's "Kritik" mentioned earlier in this list.

C. WILSON. Bible Atlas (London, SPCK, 1900).

Maps and plans, illustrating topography of Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha.

H. WINCKLER. Alt-orientalische Forschungen (Leipzig, Pfeiffer, 1901).

Continued. Series II, Vol. II, Part 2. Daniel as an historical source, Ezra-Nehemiah, the Tobiades, Malachi, Jason, and the Psalms of Solomon, The Maccabeans and Sparta. Series III, Vol. I, Part I, Esther, Ruth, the Fourth Maccabees, The Hebrews in the Tel-Amarna Letters, the Flood in E. (Genesis).

H. WINCKLER. Geschichte Israels (Leipzig, 1900).

Part II. "The Legends." Very radical and original.

ISAAC M. WISE. Reminiscences. Translated by D. Philipson.

EMMA WOLF. Heirs of Yesterday (Chicago, A. C. McClurg & Co., 1901).

L. WOLF. Menasseh ben Israel's Mission to Oliver Cromwell (London and New York, Macmillan, 1901).

Fine reprint of Menasseh ben Israel's "Hope of Israel", "Humble Address" and "Vindiciae Judaeorum", with introduction and notes. Three portraits of Menasseh accompany the volume.

M. WOLFF. Variétés homilétiques sur le pentateuque (Paris, 1900).

Extracts from Midrash, arranged under the weekly sections of the Pentateuch.

M. WORMS. Die Lehre von der Anfangslosigkeit der Welt (Münster, 1900).

Valuable for students of Maimonides and his criticism of the Mutakallimum.

A. WRIGHT. Psalms of David and the Higher Criticism (Edinburgh, Oliphant, 1900).

YEAR-BOOK OF THE CENTRAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN RABBIS (1900).

Memorial service in honor of Dr. Isaac M. Wise. Papers by H. G. Enelow, on "The Synod in the Past and its Feasibility in the Present"; R. Grossmann on "The Rabbi as a Scholar," &c.

D. YELLIN. Mikro lefi Hatof (Warsaw, "Tushia" Series, 1900-1).

Four little volumes, forming an introduction to Hebrew on a new system. Two of the volumes are "Sefer Ha-moreh", for teachers. These volumes contain dialogues between teacher and pupil, and by means of them a great deal of Hebrew is taught orally. The other two parts are called "Sefer Ha-tal-mid", for the pupils. Here, by means of pictures, the Hebrew words are taught without translation, and reading is taught by means of known words. Writing is associated with reading. The book is arranged on a very systematic and simple plan.

V. ZAPLETAL. Der Totemismus und die Religion Israels (Freiburg, Veith, 1901.)

A searching and destructive criticism of the views of the late W. R. Smith and others as to the existence of Totemistic survivals in the Old Testament. "Animal Names", "Nature Worship", "Unclean Animals", "Sacrifices", "Tattooing, &c.", "Demons" (local), "The Matriarchate," are the subjects treated in this original essay.

ZIMMERMANN. Elohim (Berlin, Mayer, 1900).

MEETING OF THE THIRTEENTH YEAR

The Annual Meeting of the Jewish Publication Society of America was held on Sunday afternoon, May 19, 1901, in the Assembly Room of the Keneseth Israel Temple, Broad Street above Columbia Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

In the absence of the President, Mr. Morris Newburger, on account of ill health, the Vice-President, Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, of New York, called the meeting to order.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, of New York, offered prayer.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The presiding officer read the address of the President of the Society, as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—This is a red letter day in the history of our Society. It seems but a short time since it was called into being, and as but yesterday when we celebrated its tenth anniversary. To-day it is Bar Mizvah; it is thirteen years old. No longer can we claim for it exemption from the consequences of deeds committed and deeds omitted; it has become a responsible being, responsible for all its actions, and the world will so hold it accountable. On you, the members of this Society, who make up its existence, you who are its bone and sinew, its flesh and its blood, a great responsibility falls this day.

The Society has undertaken great and noble tasks—the dissemination of the knowledge of Judaism, the creation of a new Jewish-English literature, and the English translation of the Bible by Jewish savants.

You are committed to these gigantic tasks, and on this important day you make a sacred vow to conscientiously and courageously dedicate yourselves to their fulfilment. To accomplish this purpose, you will make some sacrifices. Every one of you can, if you will, gain recruits for the Society; and to prove to you the urgency for such action, it is but necessary to tell you that though there are probably a million Jews in the United States, and that we have with the means at our command tried our best, the membership roll shows but five thousand, when there ought to be fifty thousand members.

The Society falls short of fulfilling its sacred mission until its publications shall be read in every Jewish household of this land. The price of membership has been made so very low in order that even the poorest of our coreligionists may be enabled to obtain the benefits of its work.

The new memberships during the year have been obtained chiefly in Philadelphia and in New York City, where our field-agent, Mrs. Scherman, has been at work. She is still continuing her canvass in the latter place, and we are hopeful from the large Jewish population that centres there, that we shall obtain many hundreds of members.

It is gratifying to note that among the new members there are many of the Russian Jewish population; and we have strong grounds for believing that this element of our community will continue to add to the Society's membership everywhere. With its growth in material prosperity, its love of learning will lead it to support an institution such as ours.

The report of the Board of Directors gives you the details of the year's work. I shall simply refer to a few salient features.

You have before you a proposed amendment to the by-laws, which will permit the publication of a magazine independent of the regular publications to be sent to members. This puts the matter which has so frequently been discussed into practical shape for action, for it is impossible to provide for a magazine from the regular subscription funds, under present conditions. I hope that the subject will be thoroughly discussed in all its aspects at this meeting, so that the Board of Directors and the Publication Committee may be guided by the thoughts expressed and the plans suggested. A prime consideration is, of course, the financial one, and any action that will make possible a separate magazine fund, will be the surest means toward the early publication of a magazine. True, there are many details which have to be worked out, but these may be left to the Board of Directors and the Publication Committee, though I am sure they will be glad to receive opinions and suggestions. Deliberate, therefore, as to a plan of action that will enable the Society to publish a Jewish magazine, which will be representative of Jewish culture and learning, and will be a valuable supplement to our regular publications in the spread of Jewish knowledge.

A magazine takes into consideration the current of events and of thought, and quickly places them before its readers. There is much in the world about us to be described from the Jewish point of view. There are Jewish problems, for the discussion of which an American-Jewish magazine is the proper vehicle. A first-class Jewish monthly, bi-monthly, or quarterly periodical is assuredly a great desideratum for American Jews; and I sincerely hope the Jewish Publication Society may be made the medium of its establishment.

One of the disappointments which I have experienced, with many of our readers, is our inability to secure and publish high class Jewish fiction from year to year. Zangwill has declared fiction to be the highest form of truth, but it must perforce be artistic. This most talented writer has taught us some great truths in his magnificent description of the "Children of the Ghetto." But there are other stories waiting to be told, and we are waiting to publish them. We shall be satisfied with lesser Zangwills. We should particularly like to publish stories which would make our own country their scenes or background, or which would bring in features of Jewish life as developed under American conditions.

We are still looking for writers from our midst, and there are indications that we are not looking altogether in vain. I feel hopeful that this Society will publish the works of some young writers who are giving evidence of talent. We may, at the same time, continue to draw upon the work of English and Continental writers. I have been impressed with some of the German works of Jewish fiction, and should be glad to see this Society publish the productions of some of their authors.

I have been led to dwell on this subject, because I understand how much more good fiction appeals to the reader than any other sort of literature. But having expressed myself thus, I feel bound to ask the members to try to appreciate the value of the other kind of literature we are sending them.

The last Year Book, thanks to Doctor Cyrus Adler, was one of the most valuable compilations of facts concerning the Jews in this country that has ever been published. It shows a large development along educational, charitable, and religious lines. If some of the members who ask, "What shall

I do with it?" would take a little time to study its contents, they might learn a little of the activity of their brethren; they might understand that the progress of the Jewish people depends on communal efforts, as well as on the efforts of the individuals in their locations.

It is very gratifying to me to be able to report that the Translation of the Bible is progressing very satisfactorily; so much so, in fact, that some parts of it will be ready for publication in the near future. Active measures must be taken to raise the money necessary for the work, and I trust that a liberal response will follow this appeal for funds. This great work—an English Bible translated by the ablest Jewish scholars—is an epoch-making event; and I feel that every Jew in the United States is vitally interested in this undertaking.

I desire to express my appreciation of the work of the Board of Trustees, the Publication Committee, and the Treasurer. The results of their labors are before you. Only those who are associated with them in their work can fully appreciate the tasks they are performing and the services they render to the Society; and I, therefore, take much pleasure in making this public acknowledgment. I also wish to give due credit to the valuable work which our Secretaries, Miss Szold and Dr. Bernheimer, are doing for the Society, and to express my appreciation of the services of our field-agent, Mrs. Kate Scherman.

Laymen throughout the country, many of the Rabbis, and a number of newspapers and periodicals, Jewish and non-Jewish, are deserving of our cordial thanks for giving publicity to the Society's work and for assistance in various ways.

As usual, you are to elect a president, a vice-president, and a second vice-president, each for one year; five directors and five honorary vice-presidents, each for three years. The Board of Directors elects the other officers and the Publication Committee. Be careful in your selection. It is important that only those shall fill the positions now vacant who have the Society's best interests at heart, and who are able and willing to labor for its welfare.

A more able and much more eloquent speaker will later on address you in relation to the affairs of the Society. I, therefore, close my address, hoping—and I believe not hoping in vain—that you will leave this meeting-place fully impressed with the fact that our Society is one of the greatest Jewish educational institutions in the world; that its purposes are unselfish, high, and noble; that it has proven its raison d'être by its continuance far beyond the time attained by any previous similar institution; and it will continue to grow and to live, until, through its instrumentality, all the world will have learned the eternal truths of Judaism.

ORGANIZATION OF THE MEETING

Nominations for Chairman of the meeting being declared in order, Mr. Herman S. Friedman, of Philadelphia, nominated Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, of New York.

Mr. Wm. B. Hackenburg, of Philadelphia, put the motion, and Dr. Leipziger was unanimously elected Chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Friedman nominated Dr. Charles S. Bernheimer, of Philadelphia, as Secretary of the meeting, and he was unanimously chosen for the office.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The Annual Report of the Board of Directors being presented in printed form for distribution, its reading was dispensed with.

The Jewish Publication Society of America has now concluded its thirteenth year.

Immediately after last year's meeting, in May, 1900, the Board of Directors elected the following officers: Treasurer, Morris Dannenbaum, of Philadelphia; Secretary, Lewis W. Steinbach, of Philadelphia; Assistant Secretary, Charles S. Bernheimer, of Philadelphia; Secretary to the Publication Committee, Henrietta Szold, of Baltimore. The following were chosen members of the Publication Committee: Mayer Sulzberger, of Philadelphia; Cyrus Adler, of Washington, D. C.; David W. Amram, of Philadelphia; Henry Berkowitz, of Philadelphia; Solomon Solis-Cohen, of Philadelphia; B. Felsenthal, of Chicago; Herbert Friedenwald, of Philadelphia; Charles Gross, of Cambridge, Massachusetts; Marcus Jastrow, of Philadelphia; Max Landsberg, of Rochester, N. Y.; Henry M. Leipziger, of New York; David Philipson, of Cincinnati; Samuel Sale, of St. Louis; Simon A. Stern, of Philadelphia; and Oscar S. Straus, of New York. The committee elected Mayer Sulzberger as its chairman.

PERMANENT FUND

The sum of $3 has been added to the Permanent Fund since the last report. The Fund now amounts to $17,104.50, as follows:

Michael Heilprin Memorial Fund:

Donation of Jacob H. Schiff	$5,000
Donation of Meyer Guggenheim.....	5,000
		<hr/> $10,000 00
Morton M. Newburger Memorial Fund.....	500	00
Bequest of J. D. Bernd.....	500	00
Donations.....	104	50
Life Membership Fund	5,900	00
Bequest (Lucien Moss).....	100	00
		<hr/> $17,104 50

No one has, during the year, availed himself of the opportunity of adding to this Fund by means of bequest or life membership. We are hopeful, however, that the desirability of increasing the stability of the Society by additions to the Fund will impress itself on the community, and that those in a position to make such contributions will not fail to include the Society among their beneficiaries.

Total 5,081

Of these there are:

Life Members.....	59
Patrons.....	12
Organizations.....	7
Members.....	4,975
Subscribers.....	28
Total.....	5,081

Included in the above are 390 members whose dues remain unpaid for the year ending June 1, 1900, and who have not received the publications of the year ending June 1, 1901. They will be omitted from the roll of membership, if their dues are not paid forthwith. There are also included in the foregoing list 185 members whose resignations take effect June 1, 1901, and 66 members whose subscriptions begin June 1, 1901.

If the membership is assumed to be 5081, there is an increase of 42 over the membership reported last year.

There is, it will be observed, no material increase in the membership. Our energetic field-agent, Mrs. K. H. Scherman, who works steadily to obtain new members, has measurable success, but the losses by lapses, resignations, and deaths nearly equal the new acquisitions.

During the past year, the agent has been canvassing chiefly in Philadelphia and New York City, and she is still in the latter city. In both communities considerable additions to the membership have been made, and it is hoped that New York City, with its great Jewish population, will furnish a large membership before the present canvass is completed.

A good proportion of the new membership in the two cities has been from among the immigrants of the last twenty years, whose children are now beginning to need the English language for instruction in Jewish literature and affairs. The support from this large and important element of the population is of the utmost significance, and it is hoped that within comparatively few years it will so grow as to largely expand the Society's power for good work.

Though our special attention has been directed to strengthening the membership in the East, the distribution throughout the country is pretty well maintained, as is shown by the tabulation by cities and towns.

PUBLICATIONS

The following publications have been issued since the last meeting:

(1) American Jewish Year Book, 5661, edited by Cyrus Adler. (2) "Sons of the Covenant," by Samuel Gordon. (3) "Songs of Exile," translated from Hebrew poets by Nina Davis. (4) "The Ethics of Judaism," Part II, by Professor Moritz Lazarus, translated from the German by Henrietta Szold.

We shall again issue a Year Book, for the forthcoming New Year. It will contain new material of current interest. Other publications that are being made ready for the press are the Book of Psalms, which will be the first product of our undertaking in the translation of the Bible, and a collection of essays by Mrs. Esther J. Ruskey.

We are in negotiation with writers for literature of various kinds—fiction, essays, scholarly studies—and are hopeful that the books issued will, as in the past, appeal to the various classes of readers among our members.

Upwards of 160,000 volumes have been sent out by the Society.

THE BIBLE TRANSLATION

The Psalms are now completely revised and ready for print. Some of the other portions of the Bible are ready for the final revision of the Style Editor. A number have been sent in to the Editor-in-chief by the translators, and are in varying states of revision. There are also a number still in the hands of the translators. The work is thus progressing, slowly but steadily, and parts can be gotten ready for publication, from time to time, as may be decided.

The Bible Fund is not growing. But $25 has been added since the last report, making the total subscribed $3755. With the approaching publication of the Psalms, the work of obtaining subscriptions to the Fund ought to be stimulated.

We trust that the generous friends of Jewish learning and scholarship will be moved by this practical evidence of our labors to renewed efforts to add to the Fund, so that the undertaking shall in no way be hampered. For the production of the complete Bible it has been estimated that the sum of $25,000 will be required.

THE JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA

It is a great pleasure to record an event of the highest interest to the members of this Society, which has for the last twelve years been engaged in the work of producing Jewish literature in the English language. This noteworthy fact is the publication, this month, of the first volume of the great Jewish Encyclopedia of the Funk & Wagnalls Company, of New York. It is the first of a series of twelve volumes, which, when completed, will be a descriptive record of the history, religion, literature, and customs of the Jewish people from the earliest times to the present day. Four hundred scholars and specialists, the notables of America and Europe, join in producing the work.

A glance at the first volume is most interesting. Hundreds of subjects are discussed in it with surprising learning and thoroughness, and yet in a plain and lucid style attractive to the many. Authors, painters, sculptors, men of affairs, events, movements, opinions, philosophies, sciences—all are treated. Times so old as to be beyond history and events of our own day are equally considered. In short, the man who is not a scholar will be astonished to see how large a proportion of the articles interest him, while he that has grown old in scholarship may be surprised to discover how much he can learn from this great cooperative work.

The treatment of Biblical subjects is novel and of the highest merit. There are generally three or four points of view. First we have a purely Biblical presentation which treats the subject strictly from the Bible side. Then all the learning of the Rabbinical literature is presented, and this is followed by the views of the modern critical school. Moreover these views are not set forth by any one man. Such a presentation might justify the suspicion of favoritism for one view and prejudice against the others. Each view is represented by an expert therein. We have thus before us for the first time and in compact shape the thought of the Bible itself, the views of the Jews on it from the close of the canon to our own day, and the critical views of the New School. To those who aim to study the Bible understandingly such a help as this is indispensable.

It is probable that the biographical notices of Jewish worthies have a more general human interest than things that might seem more important. So rich a supply of such matter has never before been furnished.

The mechanical portion of the work is especially to be commended. The paper, the ink, the printing, the illustrations are all of the highest order of excellence.

It is a noteworthy circumstance that this colossal enterprise, entailing, it is said, an outlay of three-quarters of a million of dollars, is undertaken by a firm not one of whose members is a Jew. The truth of history requires us to record that when Dr. Singer, the projector, laid his plans before our Society, we were compelled to declare that we could not command the means to undertake so great a work.

The situation in America presents a curious parallel to the beginnings of the great Jewish press of Italy. From 1475 on, when the first Hebrew book was printed at Reggio, in Calabria, the Jews of that country (especially the great printing family of Soncino) produced valuable works.

At the end of what may be called the first period, namely in 1517, a new epoch for Hebrew printing began by the entry of Christians into the business. The first and greatest of these was Daniel Bomberg, a native of Antwerp, who came to Venice, and in the year 1517 began to print the remarkable series of Hebrew books which issued from his press, among them the three great Rabbinical Bibles of 1517, 1526, and 1548, the three quarto Bibles of 1518, 1521, and 1544, the first edition of the Palestinian Talmud and the first complete edition of the Babylonian Talmud, together with a large number of other Hebrew books of many kinds.

Thenceforward and even to this day, notwithstanding the persecutions and the burning of books, Italy has continued to bear fruitful Jewish presses.

The Jewish press of America has hitherto, in its first epoch, developed promising activity, but it is not extravagant to hope that its second epoch, so auspiciously inaugurated by our American Bomberg, the Funk-Wagnalls Company, will far transcend the work of the first.

AMENDMENT TO THE BY-LAWS

An amendment to Article VI of the By-Laws is proposed. The article now reads:

“Every member of the Society shall receive a copy of each of its publications. Contributing societies shall receive a number of copies of said publications proportionate to the amount of their annual subscriptions.”

It is proposed to add:

“Provided, however, that the Society may, for a separate subscription price, publish a monthly or quarterly magazine, which the members shall receive at half rate.”

The purpose of this amendment is to enable the Society to make provision for the publication of a magazine on a basis distinct from the publication of its other works. This seems to be necessary, because the establishment and maintenance of a magazine involves the securing of funds apart from the membership funds of the Society, and the most available means of obtaining them would appear to be from those who desire to be the readers of the magazine.

Respectfully submitted by the Board of Directors,

MORRIS NEWBURGER,
President.

ADDRESS OF MR. DANIEL P. HAYS

Mr. Daniel P. Hays, of New York, delivered an address, as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—The Jewish Publication Society has now been before the public for thirteen years. Like many other movements for the education and intellectual advancement of our people, it has not received the encouragement it deserves. And yet, despite this fact, it has met with a fair measure of success.

It has placed within the reach of all the most philosophical and complete history of our people ever written—a book which may be said to throw the light of truth upon the dark epochs of our past, and to reveal the real life, impulses, and strivings of the Jewish race, as they existed in the days which it describes.

It is this work which, as is so well stated in the memoir of the author contained in the Index Volume, has demonstrated to the world that Judaism did not fulfil its mission by having begotten Christianity, but that it continued to develop its monotheistic doctrines and its ethical system, undisturbed by the loss of a national background, and borne onward only by virtue of its spirituality and ideality, producing thinkers, poets, and even statesmen, despite untold suffering, and contributing zealously to the solution of the problems of human civilization; uprooted and dispersed though its adherents were. The Society has also given its members an insight into Jewish literature, which was hitherto only the treasure of the scholar and the student; it has acquainted them with Jewish ethics; it has given them a better understanding of the nature of that much misunderstood book, the Talmud, and it has opened their eyes to the possibilities of Jewish fiction by the many charming publications it has issued in that field. In all these directions, it has bestowed innumerable benefits upon the Jews of to-day.

That it has supplied a needed want cannot be gainsaid.

In a retrospect of the history of the Jewish people, we find that in the earliest or Biblical period they stood pre-eminently before the world as the teachers of monotheism. They gave to the world a spiritual conception of the Deity, and a code of moral laws which has impressed itself upon all succeeding civilized nations.

In later days their Prophets further idealized the teachings, and raised the religious beliefs to a still higher ethical and moral level.

After the dispersion they devoted themselves to intellectual development, and pursued it with that same persistency, intensity, and success which have been marked characteristics of the race in whatever it has undertaken.

When their schools were broken up as a result of bitter persecution and intolerance, they still found refuge from their worldly griefs, in the study of the law, and the practice of their religious faith.

But denied as they were all the rights of freemen, hunted and hooted at as outcasts, debarred from all honorable pursuits, their minds became as narrow as the limits of the ghetto in which they lived, and their bodies, in many cases, stunted and weakened, as the plant from which God's blessed sunshine is shut out. The many beautiful, spiritual and ethical principles of Judaism were buried and lost sight of beneath a mass of technical ritualism and formal ceremonial.

At last the walls of the ghetto were broken down by the advancing tide of civilization, and the Jew, coming forth from his long imprisonment, found himself upon the broad open field of life, with no road barred to him.

Dazed by the sunshine of freedom, to which he had so long been unaccustomed, it took him a little while to adjust himself to his new surroundings, and to realize the changed conditions. But he soon began to avail himself of the new opportunities. A new world, where "man's equality" had been proclaimed and established at a great sacrifice of noble lives, beckoned to him, and offered him a friendly greeting.

He eagerly accepted the invitation, and found there a vent for the pent up activities of years. With industry, economy, thrift, and ability, as his contribution of capital to the business enterprises of his new home, he soon began to reap substantial rewards. He divided honors with his fellow-men in mercantile pursuits, law, medicine, and in the arts and sciences. But a new danger confronted him. He was making strides toward material prosperity at the expense of his spiritual life. How had this come about? He had found it difficult to accommodate the Eastern forms, ceremonies, and injunctions as to his religious life to the new environment. So he began to cut and prune, in many cases with so reckless a hand that he sapped the life blood, and the religious tree withered and died. He continued to be a Jew in the racial sense and, as he thought, in the religious sense, by an observance of the two great holidays yearly. He could not stop in the race for wealth to observe his Sabbath, or practice the other tenets of his faith. Some of his fellows might outdistance him, if he did. He forgot for the time being that while such an observance of religion might satisfy him, it could not appeal to his children—to the new generation. The roots of his faith ran deep into the past, where they were nourished and fed by his early training and education. His children had no such anchorage. They had not become imbued with the spirit of Judaism in the home, and they knew but little of the history of their race.

Modern educational requirements did not give these things a place in the curriculum. They looked on, amazed, for a time at the terrible conflict waged by their elders, and were soon themselves eagerly engaged in the conflict between orthodoxy and reform. Was Judaism merely a question of form and ceremony? It seemed so to them, else why so fierce a struggle for their maintenance or abolition. They were not imbued with the spirit of their faith, or grounded in its history, tradition, or literature.

It was patent to many thinking minds that something must be done to avert the catastrophe that was pending, to awaken an interest among the rising generation in Judaism, and to brush aside the clouds of darkness and obscurity in which it had been veiled. They felt satisfied that the apathy and discontent so rapidly spreading among our people in this country would be removed, if once they were educated in the history and literature of their past.

Doubting and scoffing were the result of ignorance and a consequent misunderstanding of the relative value of forms and ceremonies to religious life

The latter half of the century just past saw, therefore, many educational movements started, as an offset to this condition of affairs. The City of Philadelphia has led in this, as in all movements for the intellectual development of the Jew. Young Men's Hebrew Associations, Libraries, the Jewish Publication Society, and the Jewish Chautauqua movement, the Jewish Historical Society, and the Judæans, are all efforts in this direction.

Nor am I unduly praising this Association when I say that its work is wider reaching than that of any of its sister societies, and at the same time it is their most valuable adjunct. Its work is accomplished silently, and without any apparent effort, and the community unconsciously, as it were, receives the benefits.

Its members are asked to do nothing, to give up no time or effort, but for the small sum of $3 a year to become its beneficiaries.

The books it issues go into thousands of Jewish homes—in some cases to be read with avidity, but in many others perhaps only to grace the shelves with their red bindings, and by their refulgence to cast at least an apparent literary atmosphere about the home. But there they stand, as silent monitors of the Society's work, until in some moment of idle curiosity some member of the family is tempted to peep beyond the gorgeous covers, and then perchance the spell is broken, interest is awakened, and the purpose of the Society is accomplished.

Or where our printed messengers have been mute upon the shelves, the Jewish Chautauqua comes along with its message for the uplifting of the race, succeeds in stimulating a desire for knowledge, and points the way to the new aspirant, by teaching him to utilize what has hitherto been but an ornament to his walls.

We have lately grown to more fully appreciate the great utility of libraries in educational work among the masses. But there we always have the problem of the selection of books suited to the condition and character of the reader. The Jewish Publication Society solves this problem also. It selects from the storehouse of knowledge those treasures best suited to the education of the present generation in the field of Jewish history and literature, and without waiting for the reader to call for them, places them in his home, thus enlisting his attention and giving him the opportunity which, without the Society, he would miss.

That these advantages have reached only about five thousand of our people is not the fault of the Society, nor has it discouraged its officers. It is a large membership compared with that of many other Societies, and yet, considering the small admission fee charged, and the fact that an appeal is made to over a million of our coreligionists, it cannot but be a matter of surprise that so few have enrolled themselves among its supporters. Appeals for material assistance for the poor, the suffering, and the fatherless have always met with a ready response.

It is not so, as I have previously remarked, with efforts tending to intellectual development where neither the need, nor the results accomplished, are so patent to the ordinary eye. It behooves us, therefore, who appreciate the importance and necessity of such work, to be all the more diligent and energetic in our efforts, to the end that a greater number of our race may be benefited.

There has been, during the past ten years, a great awakening among our people—a realization that the Jew is not to become great by his material achievements, but by his contribution toward the higher ideals of life and by his endeavors toward the uplifting of the race. Wealth and station are not to be despised, but we are learning to give them their proper place in life, and to understand that they are not stepping-stones to the Kingdom of Heaven. Orthodoxy and Reform no longer waste their energies in hurling epithets at each other, or in engaging in fierce conflicts. Each realizes the work it has to perform in its own field, and bends all its energies to accomplish it. Instead of working on broadly divergent lines, we are steadily converging the lines of work toward each other, and in such fields as the Jewish Publication Society we find them united for a common end.

In the accomplishment of these changes the Jewish Publication Society has been no small factor. It has by means of its publications sown the seed of enlightenment and knowledge in many hitherto barren places, and is therefore entitled to its full share of credit for the harvest that is being gathered. Knowledge is the torch that lights the world—the material as well as the religious. The Jew has ever been eager to hold that torch high above his head, though often prevented from doing so by the religious intolerance of the age. Now that no such obstacle exists, let it be our work to place it once more in his hands, and then to continue the march, casting light upon the dark and troubled portions of the past. Let it be our duty to place our people before the world in their true character, to put the blame for our retrogression where it belongs, to reveal the true beauty and glory of Judaism, by giving its ethical and moral lessons to the world and trying to practice them in our daily lives. Herein lies the work of the Jewish Publication Society—spreading knowledge that light may follow in its path—light that will reveal not only to the Jew, but to the world, the true beauty of Judaism; its lofty and spiritual conception of the Deity; its broad and universal application; its uplifting and moral influence; its reverence for the sanctity of home and family life; its aspirations for the brotherhood of man.

It is in line with this work that the Society has undertaken to issue a new translation of the Bible—that greatest of all books, which contains the earliest records of our race and describes the birth and development of our religion. Its poetry, its imagery, its lofty sentiments, its unequalled style, its pathos, its tenderness, its grandeur, have given it the highest place in the world's literature, without regard to its sacred character. Christianity regards it with the most tender reverence and draws from it inspiration and hope. How much more forcibly should it appeal to the Jew! It contains his family pedigree and history, by which he can trace his genealogy back, to the known beginning of the world. It describes the revelations of God to his forefathers, and transmits to future generations a code of moral and religious precepts that have been universally accepted. It preaches the loftiest ideals of life, and voices the noblest sentiments of our higher natures. It furnishes consolation in time of trouble and grief, and sounds the most joyous notes for periods of happiness and festivity.

Such a book should be in every Jewish home, to be read daily by parent and child. Its treasures should be within the reach of all—strengthening their faith, inspiring their hope, increasing their knowledge.

To make this possible is the aim of the Jewish Publication Society by publishing it at a nominal cost.

It requires financial assistance for this work. Let it be the pride of the members of this Society that they contributed to such a result.

Let them go forth from this meeting with the determination to assist in the early realization of this ideal, by securing that material support without which such an undertaking can never be accomplished.

THE JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA

On motion of the Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, of New York, it was agreed that the Society congratulate the editors and publishers of the Jewish Encyclopedia, upon the appearance of the first volume.

Dr. Isidore Singer, of New York, Managing Editor of the Encyclopedia, made acknowledgment of the motion.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED

The Chairman appointed the following committees:

On Nominations: Mr. Wm. B. Hackenburg, of Philadelphia, Chairman; Mr. Morris Liveright, of Philadelphia; and Mr. Emil Selig, of Philadelphia.

On the Part of the Report of the Board of Directors relating to Permanent Fund: Mr. Jacob Singer, of Philadelphia, Chairman; Mr. I. B. Langstadter, of Philadelphia; and Mr. Adolph Eichholz, of Philadelphia.

On the Part of the Report of the Board of Directors relating to Membership: Mr. Louis Wolf, of Philadelphia, Chairman; Mr. David Sulzberger, of Philadelphia; and Mr. Lawrence Marks, of Philadelphia.

On the Part of the Report of the Board of Directors relating to Publications: Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, of New York, Chairman; Dr. Isidore Singer, of New York; and Rev. Dr. Wm. Rosenau, of Baltimore.

On the Part of the Report of the Board of Directors relating to Bible Fund: Mr. Philip Cowen, of New York, Chairman; Mr. Wm. Gersley, of Philadelphia; and Rev. Clifton H. Levy, of New York.

A recess was then taken.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The Committee on Nominations presented the following names:

Directors, for three years: Edwin A. Fleisher, of Philadelphia; Daniel Guggenheim, of New York; Ephraim Lederer, of Philadelphia; Simon Miller, of Philadelphia; Harris Weinstock, of Sacramento, Cal.

President, for one year, Morris Newburger, of Philadelphia.

Vice-President, for one year, Henry M. Leipziger, of New York.

Second Vice-President, for one year, Herman S. Friedman, of Philadelphia.

Honorary Vice-Presidents, for three years: Jacob Haas, of Atlanta, Ga.; Max Heller, of New Orleans, La.; Ella Jacobs, of Philadelphia; Simon W. Rosendale, of Albany, N. Y.; Joseph Stolz, of Chicago.

On motion, the Secretary was instructed to cast the unanimous ballot of the meeting for the nominees, and they were declared duly elected.

PERMANENT FUND

The Committee on the Part of the Report relating to Permanent Fund made the following report:

We regret to note that little or no progress as to the increase of the Permanent Fund of the Society is noticeable during the past year.

We are, however, of the opinion that continued efforts along the lines established at last year's Annual Meeting should be put forth and persisted in, and with the growth and usefulness of the Society they will inevitably result in accomplishing the object.

We recommend that along with each publication there be sent a printed blank form of bequest of a legacy to the Society for its Permanent Fund, and furthermore a printed notice calling attention to the fact that proceeds of life memberships go into said Fund.

We further recommend, in view of the interest manifested in the work of the Society by a large number of the legal fraternity throughout the United States, that the Trustees be requested to communicate with the lawyers of the Jewish faith in the several States, requesting them to call to the attention of those about to make testamentary disposition of their estates, the needs, objects, aims, and achievements of the Jewish Publication Society, and secure bequests and legacies if possible.

We believe that active propaganda in these and such other directions as may be decided upon by the Trustees will eventually enforce the recognition of the importance of this Fund to the permanence and stability of the Society and its great mission.

On motion, the report was adopted.

BIBLE FUND

The Committee on the Part of the Report relating to Bible Fund submitted the following:

It is their opinion that the slow growth of the Bible Fund is due somewhat to the delay in presenting to the members any tangible evidence of the progress of the work.

Hence, they recommend the early publication of the Psalms, which, they understand, are already in shape for printing; that, when done, the work shall be placed on the market at a moderate price, after the members have been supplied; that the large sale following the publication, if the form, shape, and price be satisfactory, is likely to yield a sufficient sum, judging from experience with similar publications, to help materially in bringing means towards continuing further the great and needful work that the Society has undertaken in translating the Bible.

The Committee further suggest that the publication of the Psalms be followed up with special efforts to enlist the financial support of those of our people who appreciate the value of the work, believing, as they do, that the appearance of this initial volume will stimulate such subscriptions.

The report was, on motion, adopted.

MEMBERSHIP

The Committee on the Part of the Report relating to Membership stated:

The Committee on Membership report that it is their opinion that if a proper committee were appointed by the Board of Directors to solicit membership, a large increase could be obtained, especially at this period, in view of the publication of the Bible; that it is their opinion that additional canvassers should be obtained. Judging by the excellent result of the work done by the solicitor now employed, it would, no doubt, be the means of largely increasing the membership of the Society.

The report was discussed by Mr. David Sulzberger, of Philadelphia, Mr. Philip Cowen, of New York, and Dr. Isidore Singer, of New York.

Mr. Cowen suggested the substitution of a volume of Graetz's "History of the Jews" for one of the other volumes of a current year, whenever members so desire.

The report was, on motion, adopted.

PUBLICATIONS

The Committee on the Part of the Report relating to Publications reported as follows:

The Committee are pleased to learn that separate books of the Bible will be issued in the near future. But they earnestly suggest the desirability and the practical advantage of printing with each Bible-book a comprehensive introduction and a short commentary in the form of notes, embodying the results, not only of modern criticism, but also of Rabbinic exegesis. Such a commentary will give it added value, and will make it sought by Christian as well as by Jewish scholars.

The Committee gladly endorse the choice of works thus far issued. They would, however, suggest, as the policy of the future, that the Society give less and less of its attention to the issuing or translation of such works as do not appeal to the Jewish public at large, on account of their scientific character. The aim of the Publication Society should ever be the education of the people.

Mr. Charles Hoffman, of Philadelphia, moved to insert in the report that the Society publish standard works in place of the phrase suggesting the publication of popular works.

The amendment was lost, and on motion the report was adopted as submitted.

AMENDMENT TO BY-LAWS

An Amendment to Article VI of the By-Laws was proposed. The article now reads: "Every member of the Society shall receive a copy of its publications. Contributing societies shall receive a number of copies of said publications proportionate to the amount of their annual subscriptions."

It was proposed to add: "Provided, however, that the Society may, for a separate subscription price, publish a monthly or quarterly magazine, which the members shall receive at half-rate."

The section of the President's address referring to the proposition was read, and the amendment was discussed by the Rev. Clifton H. Levy, Mr. Daniel P. Hays, Dr. Isidore Singer, Mr. David Sulzberger, Mr. Philip Cowen, Hon. Mayer Sulzberger, and Mr. Herman S. Friedman.

On motion of Mr. Friedman, the amendment was laid on the table.

Mr. David Sulzberger moved the thanks of the meeting to the Temple Keneseth Israel for the use of the Assembly Room. Unanimously agreed to.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

C. S. BERNHEIMER, Secretary.

CHARTER

The terms of the charter are as follows:

The name of the corporation is THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

The said corporation is formed for the support of a benevolent educational undertaking, namely, for the publication and dissemination of literary, scientific and religious works, giving instruction in the principles of the Jewish religion, which are to be distributed among the members of the corporation, and to such other persons and institutions as may use the same in the promotion of benevolent educational work.

The business of said corporation is to be transacted in the city and county of Philadelphia.

The corporation is to exist perpetually.

There is no capital stock, and there are no shares of stock.

The corporation is to be managed by a Board of Trustees, consisting of fifteen members, and by the following officers: President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, and such other officers as may from time to time be necessary.

BY-LAWS

ARTICLE I

Membership

SECTION I.—The Society shall be composed of Annual Members, Patrons, Friends and Life Members. Any person of the Jewish faith may become a Member by paying annually the sum of three dollars ($3), or a Patron by the annual payment of twenty dollars ($20), or a Friend by the annual payment of fifty dollars ($50), or a Life Member by one payment of one hundred dollars ($100).

SEC. II.—Any Jewish society may become a Member by the annual payment of ten dollars ($10).

SEC. III.—Any person may become a Subscriber by the annual payment of three dollars ($3), which entitles him or her to all the publications of the Society to which members are entitled.

ARTICLE II

Meetings

SECTION I.—The annual meeting of this Society shall be held in the month of May, the day of such meeting to be fixed by the Directors at their meeting in the previous March.

SEC. II.—Special meetings may be held at any time at the call of the President, or by a vote of a majority of the Board of Directors, or at the written request of fifty members of the Society.

ARTICLE III

Officers and their Duties

SECTION I.—There shall be fifteen Directors, to be elected by the Society by ballot.

At the first meeting all of the said fifteen shall be elected, five of them to serve for one year, five for two years, and five for three years, and at every subsequent annual meeting five shall be elected for three years.

SEC. II.—Out of the said fifteen, the Society shall annually elect a President, Vice-President, and Second Vice-President, who shall hold their offices for one year.

SEC. III.—The Society shall also elect fifteen Honorary Vice-Presidents, in the same manner and for the same terms of office as the Directors are chosen.

SEC. IV.—The Board of Directors shall elect a Treasurer, a Secretary, and such other officers as they may from time to time find necessary or expedient for the transaction of the Society's business.

SEC. V.—The Board of Directors shall appoint its own committees, including a Publication Committee, which committee may consist in whole or in part of members of the Board.

The Publication Committee shall serve for one year.

Quorum

SECTION I.—Forty members of the Society shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Vacancies

SECTION I.—The Board of Directors shall have power to fill all vacancies for unexpired terms.

ARTICLE VI

Benefits

SECTION I.—Every member of the Society shall receive a copy of each of its publications. Contributing societies shall receive a number of copies of said publications proportionate to the amount of their annual subscriptions.

ARTICLE VII

Free Distribution

SECTION I.—The Board of Directors is authorized to distribute copies of the Society's publications among such institutions as may be deemed proper, and wherever such distribution may be deemed productive of good for the cause of Israel.

ARTICLE VIII

Auxiliaries

SECTION I.—Other associations for a similar object may be made auxiliary to this Society, by such names and in such manner as may be directed by the Board of Directors, and shall have the privilege of representation at meetings. Agencies for the sale and distribution of the Society's publications shall be established by the Board of Directors in different sections of the country. The Society shall have the right to establish branches.

ARTICLE IX

Finances

SECTION I.—Moneys received for life memberships, and donations and bequests for such purpose, together with such other moneys as the Board of Directors may deem proper, shall constitute a permanent fund, but the interest of such fund may be used for the purposes of the Society.

ARTICLE X

Amendments

These By-Laws may be altered or amended by a vote of two-thirds of those entitled to vote at any meeting of the Society; provided that thirty days' notice be given by the Board of Directors, by publication, to the members of the Society.

We are firm believers in the efficacy of good printing.

If you have not enjoyed the satisfaction of using printing that is something more than paper and ink, send some of your work to us to do, and we believe that it will convert you to our view of the question

Our well-known policy of continually adding to and increasing our facilities to enable us to handle more and larger work has never suffered us to lose sight of the necessity of correspondingly bettering quality.

to the Permanent Settlement of the Marranos in Holland (1648 C.E.). 743
pp.

Vol. V. From the Chmielnicki Persecution in Poland (1648 C.E.) to the Present
Time. 766 pp.

Vol. VI. Containing a Memoir of the Author by Dr. Philipp Bloch, an Index to the Five Volumes, Maps, and a Chronological Table of Jewish History. 644
pp.

"Professor Graetz is the historiographer par excellence of the Jews. His work, at present the authority upon the subject of Jewish history, bids fair to hold its pre-eminent position for some time, perhaps decades."—Preface to Index Volume.

OUTLINES OF JEWISH HISTORY. From the Return from Babylon to the Present Time.—By LADY MAGNUS. Revised by M. FRIEDLÄNDER. With three Maps, a Frontispiece, and Chronological Tables. 388 pp. Library Edition, $1.00; School Edition, 75 cents.

"The entire work is one of great interest, it is written with moderation, and yet with a fine enthusiasm for the great race which is set before the reader's mind."—Atlantic Monthly.

ESSAYS AND MISCELLANEOUS WORKS

SONGS OF EXILE. By Hebrew Poets.—Translated by NINA DAVIS. 146 pp. 75 cents.

"Their charm of manner and depth of feeling must win for these poems many devoted admirers."—ISRAEL ABRAHAMS. Jewish Chronicle (London).

AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK for 5661 (1900-1901).—Edited by CYRUS ADLER. 763 pp. $1.00.

"Must prove of value and interest to Jews, and will certainly widen the horizon and sympathies of all non-Jews."—Nation.

AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK for 5660 (1899-1900).—Edited by CYRUS ADLER. 290 pp. 75 cents.

"This is the first general year-book of the Jewish institutions of America. It contains a directory of national organizations, a directory of local organizations arranged alphabetically by States and towns, a list of Jewish periodicals published in this country, and statistics of Jewish population."—Review of Reviews (American).

THE ETHICS OF JUDAISM.—By PROFESSOR M. LAZARUS, Ph. D. Translated by HENRIETTA SZOLD. Complete in four parts.

Part I. Foundation of Jewish Ethics. 309 pp. $1.25.

Part II. Sanctification of Life the Aim of Morality. 300 pp. $1.25.

"For the book itself there is no other word but indispensable."—Expository Times.

JEWISH SERVICES IN SYNAGOGUE AND HOME.—By LEWIS N. DEMBITZ. 487 pp. $1.75.

"A work which will keep up the knowledge and remembrance of the devotional life of the Jews as it was in the past, and of the liturgical literature as it evolved throughout ages and in various countries."—Jewish Spectator.

STUDIES IN JUDAISM.—By S. SCHIECHTER. 359 pp. $1.75.

"Mr. Schechter is one of the few men whom we possess to-day who seem to understand that to popularize Judaism is not unworthy of the greatest scholar."—EMIL G. HIRSCH, Reform Advocate.

JEWISH LITERATURE AND OTHER ESSAYS.
—By GUSTAV KARPELES. 404 pp. $1.25.

"The essays have the charm of an attractive style, combined with a subject of great and varied interest."—Independent.

SABBATH HOURS. Thoughts.—By LIEBMAN ADLER. 338 pp. $1.25.

"Rabbi Adler was a man of strong and fertile mind, and his sermons are eminently readable."—Sunday-School Times.

SOME JEWISH WOMEN.—By HENRY ZIRNDORF. 270 pp. $1.25.

"The side-lights which this book casts upon rabbinic life and thought will attract readers."—Critic.

CHAPTERS ON JEWISH LITERATURE.—By ISRAEL ABRAHAMS. 275 pp. $1.25.

"The author has performed his task with admirable taste and judgment. He has written a primer of Jewish literature, it is true, an elementary manual, so to speak, but it is agreeably free from the faults of abruptness and fragmentariness so common to that class of booklets. . . . It is not a mere bibliography, nor is it a collection of names and works; but a sketch in outline, warmed by the author's sympathetic treatment and enriched by his suggestive genius."—Jewish Messenger.

A SKETCH OF JEWISH HISTORY.—By GUSTAV KARPELES. 109 pp. Boards. 30 cents. (Special Series No. 5.)

"Dr. Karpeles's standpoint is a sane one, and his intimate acquaintance with the details of his subject has in no degree confused his sketch of the general development."—Critic.

JEWISH LIFE IN THE MIDDLE AGES.—By ISRAEL ABRAHAMS. 452 pp. $1.75.

"Mr. Abrahams has really done a very good and useful piece of work. He has taken up one side of mediæval life, and given us the means of getting a thorough understanding of it."—Bookman.

OLD EUROPEAN JEWRIES.—By DAVID PHILIPSON. 281 pp. $1.25.

"Philipson's book is a very valuable historical and ethnographical contribution."—GUSTAV KARPELES, Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums.

THE TALMUD.—By ARSÈNE DARMESTETER. Translated from the French by HENRIETTA SZOLD. Boards. 30 cents. (Special Series No. 4.)

"Few persons know what 'The Talmud' signifies. The booklet, with this title, . . . is multum in parvo on this theme. That stupendous library of rabbinic lore is here described with a fulness and a clearness not surpassed in many larger and more pretentious works."—Dial.

THE TALMUD.—Reprinted from the "Literary Remains" of EMANUEL DEUTSCH. Boards. 30 cents. (Special Series No. 3.)

"When first published . . . made its author, then one of the under-librarians at the British Museum, famous, and still remains an admirable short study."—Atlantic Monthly.

READINGS AND RECITATIONS. For Jewish Homes and Schools.—Compiled by ISABEL E. COHEN. 294 pp. $1.25.

"This book should be found in every Jewish home; it should find its way into every Jewish Sabbath-school; for none will lay it aside without feeling that a religion which could intone such songs and inspire such bards has every claim upon the intelligent reverence of those in its household born."—EMIL G. HIRSCH, Reform Advocate.

THE PERSECUTION OF THE JEWS IN RUSSIA.—87 pp. Paper. 25 cents. (Special Series No. 1.)

"The pamphlet is full of facts, and will inform people very fully in regard to the basis of the complaints made by the Jews against Russia."
—Public Opinion.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE FIRST CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN (New York, 1896). 426 pp. $1.00.

"Among the many speeches recorded, we have found several of much more than ordinary power."—Public Opinion.

PAPERS OF THE JEWISH WOMEN'S CONGRESS (Chicago, 1893). 270 pp. $1.00.

"This collection interprets the motive force which actuates the daughters of Israel under all life's circumstances, and it is certainly to the credit of the Jewish women of America that they should have been able to so effectually voice the sentiments and thoughts that pervade their sex."—Jewish World, London.

FICTION

SONS OF THE COVENANT.—By SAMUEL GORDON.
Illustrated. 500 pp. $1.50.

"A charming story, attractive not alone for its healthful, invigorating tone, but an indefinable spiritual quality that stamps the author as full of promise."—Jewish Messenger.

UNDER THE EAGLE'S WING.—By SARA MILLER.
Illustrated. 229 pp. 75 cents.

"It is a story of the days of Maimonides. . . . The author is to be commended for her book, that abounds in stirring incidents and is written with considerable ability."—Jewish Messenger.

THEY THAT WALK IN DARKNESS. Ghetto Tragedies.—By I. ZANGWILL. 486 pp. $1.50. Sold to Members only.

"While the tragic issue of each of these remarkable stories is inevitable, they are illumined by flashes of fancy, satire, irony and humor. No reader who is not blinded by prejudice will rise from the perusal of this engrossing volume without an enhanced sense of compassion for, and admiration of, the singular race of whose traits and temperament Mr. Zangwill is perhaps the most gifted interpreter."—Spectator, London.

LOST PRINCE ALMON.—By LOUIS PENDLETON.

Illustrated. 218 pp. 75 cents.

"It is a charmingly written story of the little Prince Jehoash, son of Abaziah, whom the Prince Jehoiada had rescued from the clutches of Athaliah. . . . Our Sunday-school literature is so extremely poor that we hail this volume with particular delight, and we predict that it will soon be one of the most popular gift books for Jewish children."—Jewish Voice.

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO.—By I. ZANGWILL.

537 pp. $1.50. Sold to Members only.

"With marvellous industry, and with no small amount of erudition, he has packed together into the scenes dealing with Uriel Acosta, Sabbatai Zevi, Spinoza, the Baal Shem, Maimon, Heine, Lassalle and Beaconsfield, just those incidents and sayings of their careers which bring out most clearly their Jewish aspects."—JOSEPH JACOBS, Bookman.

IN THE PALE. Stories and Legends of the Russian Jews.—By HENRY ILIOWIZI. 367 pp. $1.25.

"Henry Iliowizi . . . is a master of both humor and pathos, as is shown in his book of stories and legends entitled 'In the Pale.'"—Sunday-School Times.

CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO.—By I. ZANGWILL.

2 vols. 451 pp., 325 pp. $2.50.

"Nowhere else have been given us more realistic pictures of the shabbiness, the unwholesomeness, the close-packed human misery, the squalor, the vulgarity, the sharp struggle in the mean competition of life, in the East End of London. [But] there is a world of poetry, of dreams, of imagination, of high calling, of intellectual subtlety, even, in which sordid London, not Jewish, has no part nor lot."—CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Harper's Magazine.

RABBI AND PRIEST.—By MILTON GOLDSMITH. 314

pp. $1.00.

"The author has attempted to depict faithfully the customs and practices of the Russian people and government in connection with the Jewish population of that country. The book is a strong and well-written story."—Public Opinion.

THINK AND THANK.—By S. W. COOPER. Illustrated.

"Sir Moses Montefiore is the hero of this story. . . . 'Think and Thank' will please boys, and it will be found popular in Sunday-school libraries."—New York Herald.

VOEGELE'S MARRIAGE AND OTHER TALES.
—By LOUIS SCHNABEL. 83 pp. Paper. 25 cents.
(Special Series No. 2.)

"'The False Turn' is a charming little sketch, and the humor of it very delicate and amusing. 'Voegele's Marriage' I find also very artistic and interesting."—EMMA LAZARUS.
